Russia's Reply Thanks, Sir Henri Soul and Body One Quite a Budget

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1929, King Features Synd., Inc.

WASHINGTON says Secretary of State Stimson was surprised to learn that Russia considers our meddling in China "not a friendly act."

Considering that we have refused to recognize the Russian government, putting on airs, calling ourselves superior, and then having the effrontery to tell Russia what Russia should do in China, what could we expect?

Russia, in territory, is bigger than the United States. In population she is greater.

In ability she is not inferior. Who are we, with all our money, that we should tell Russia what to do?

We don't allow Russia to dictate to us. And the Russians show common sense when they tell us to do what we don't know enough to do—namely, TO MIND OUR OWN BUSINESS. Russia did not tell us what to do with our marines in Nicaragua.

Sir Henri Wilhelm August Deterding, head boss of the Royal Dutch Shell Co. of Europe, is perhaps the greatest oil man, excepting our own John D.

Sir Henri's descent upon the United States oil industry, taking in everything, from wells to wagons, did not please American oil men. It was too much like the descent of Attila on Western Europe.

But if American oil men will take the advice that Deterding gave them in Chicago on Tuesday, they may save in the future a great deal more than Deterding's extraordinare able competition is costing them today.

Deterding warns American oil operators against our dangerous waste and overproduction.

He warns the people of the United States that they are now recklessly squandering and lavishly exporting a precious product that they will be compelled to buy back later at higher prices.

The fact that Deterding's companies, invading the United States, have become the most aggressive factor in the American oil industry, should not keep American oil men from accepting Mr. Deterding's warning.

They may not enjoy his competition. They should value his common sense.

Dr. Butler of Columbia, Dr. Kirby, and all promoting that important scientific center, including the New York state authorities, are to be congratulated.

At the dedication on Tuesday, Dr. Eugene Bleuler, of the University of Zurich, explained to a hundred and fifty assembled scientists that acquired characteristics are transmitted through successive generations. Average intelligence realizes that.

Professor Bleuler says the body and soul are one.

Billions upon billions of individual cells make up the human body. They are inhabitants of a great republic; one human being.

Each cell has its spark of consciousness, the total being a human mind.

The human body and mind—the two great marvels of our small world.

Don't fail to read "The Universe Around Us," by Sir James Jeans, published by the Macmillan Co. After you have read that book you will gasp, and you will know more.

You will also feel greater respect for Professor Millikan, California scientist, who told the world about cosmic rays, which, coming from distant space, far outside of the galactic circle, bombard our earth.

It may interest you to know, on the authority of Professor Jeans, one of the great living scientists, that those Millikan rays "break up millions of atoms in each of our bodies every second."

But thus bombarded we go on living. How many atoms must we have?

You ought to read that book, "The Universe Around Us," if you have a fairly good mental digestion. This entire column will be devoted to it presently.

This is mentioned that department stores and book stores may be prepared to meet a demand.

President Hoover presents to Congress a budget of three billion eight hundred and thirty million and a few odd hundred thousand dollars.

It seems a great deal as compared with the days before the war when the Government spent one billion in two years and everybody yelled, "What extravagance."

However, thanks to Secretary Mellon, President Coolidge and President Hoover, the amount that we are going to spend next year is a great deal less than we have been spending.

The income tax will be cut $160,000,000 if plans go through.

PENNROAD'S B.&M. DEAL UP TO CONGRESS

That eventuality was forecast today in the annual report of the Interstate Commerce Commission, which recommends a Congressional probe of railroad holding corporations and serious consideration of regulatory legislation.

The commission's report specifically mentions the Pennroad Corp, the holding company through which the Pennsylvania trunk line stepped in to acquire probable control of the Boston & Maine at a time when the six New England governors, rail and industrial heads were trying to bring about a merger of New England rail systems.

AS TO COMPETING ROADS

The commission points out that the effect of holding companies acquiring control of parallel and competing roads may be to lessen competition and virtually effectuate railroad unification contrary to manifest intention of Congress to subject such unification to regulation of the commission.

While the governing body's report was being made public at Washington two important phases of the situation developed in Boston.

The first was the probability of a merger of the New Haven and the Boston & Maine roads, to be brought about by voting stock held in each by the Pennsylvania owners.

B. & A. TO STAY OUT.

The second was the definite assurance that the Boston & Albany, under lease to the New York Central, will not be a party to any merger, but will seek to extend its own holdings in this district.

Consolidation of the New Haven and the Boston & Maine may or may not be in keeping with the desires of the New England governors, depending upon the manner in which it is brought about. Rail

2 Naval Men Rescued From Dory at Sea

Gloucester, Dec. 5—After two navy airplanes, a navy tug and four Coast Guard craft today had searched for two wireless operators missing since last night in an open dory near Thatcher's Island, they were rescued today by a fisherman.

The two navy men are operators Harry Erwin, 20, of Oklahoma, and William J Gould, 26, of Virginia.

They went ashore before dusk at the Rockport Coast Guard station, accompanied by Glenn Bowen, another operator. After making some purchases in the town they returned to their boat.

Bowen refused to accompany them, as there is a naval regulation against leaving the mainland for Thatchers Island after dark.

There was a stiff offshore breeze blowing and the mercury was down to 12 above zero.

They were the first sovereigns of a united Italy to enter the Vatican, which only recently ceased to be a place of self-imposed imprisonment for the pontiffs.

The King and Queen journeyed to Vatican City, the newest political entity in Europe, with an imposing retinue of courtiers, including Minister of Foreign Affairs Dino Grandi and Count de Vecchi, Italian ambassador to the Holy See.

McManus then walked over to where his wife sat with his sister and kissed both. He was heartily congratulated by many friends and left the building amid a booming of flashlights.

BIG EMPLOYERS WILL KEEP WAGES UP

State's Largest Industries Pledge No Cut Will Be Made in Year

More than a score of the largest industries of the state today assured the Massachusetts Industrial Commission at the State House of their purpose to maintain present wage levels in conformity with President Hoover's prosperity campaign.

In commenting on the returns from questionnaires sent to manufacturers by his office, Chairman Frederick H Payne declared the they are "extremely satisfactory."

Pledges received included the New England Confectionery Co, Boot Rubber Company, United States Shoe Machinery Company, Eaton, Crane & Pike Company, Pittsfield; Boston & Maine Railroad, Boston Consolidated Gas Company, Edison Electric Illuminating Co. of Boston; New England Telephone & Telegraph Company, Boston Elevated Railway Company, Charles H. Tenney & Co., Boston, executive managers for ten gas and electric companies; New England Power Association, Hathaway Bakeries, Inc., Ward Baking Company, Heywood-Wakefield Company, Lever Brothers Cambridge; Daly's Golden Rule Shoe Co., Lynn; American Printing Company, Fall River; Devon Mills Inc., New Bedford; Germania Mills, Holyoke; Ginn & Co., Cambridge; American Writing Paper Company, Holyoke, and American Hide & Leather Company, Lowell.

TO KEEP WAGES UP

Boston & Maine: "It is the purpose of the management of the Boston & Maine to maintain the rate of wages of Boston & Maine employes at its present level. Thomas N. Perkins, acting president."

Hoover Calls on Big Business for Action

Washington, Dec. 5 (AP)—President Hoover looks upon the American people as a whole to be responsible for maintenance of stability and prosperity, and feels that the keynote of their efforts should be the "good old word—work."

This was the message he gave personally today to the conference of several hundred prominent business men called into session here by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States to further the prosperity program recently laid down by the Chief Executive.

"I have no desire to preach," the President said. "I may, however, mention one good old word—work."

Who Put the Mess in the Message?

PRIME MINISTER RAMSAY MacDONALD said:

"NO PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES IS GOING TO GO BACK UPON THEIR TRADITIONAL POLICY OF KEEPING OUT OF EUROPEAN MESSES."

Ramsay MacDonald said that after he had been in America and learned the temper of the American people.

But an American President DID go back upon the traditional policy of the United States and DID put the European mess into a presidential message. President Hoover said:

"I shall direct that our signature be affixed to the protocol of adherence (to the court of international justice) and shall submit it for the approval of the Senate with a special message at some time when it is convenient to deal with it."

Ramsay MacDonald was WRONG in thinking that no President would go back upon the traditional policy of this country.

Washington, according to Mr. Hoover, WAS WRONG in urging the United States to keep out of foreign entanglements; and the American people WERE OBVIOUSLY WRONG, if they wanted to keep out of European messes, in electing Mr. Hoover President of the United States.

However, Mr. MacDonald was right in one thing when he said: "THE AMERICAN PEOPLE CERTAINLY ARE NOT GOING TO MIX THEMSELVES UP IN EUROPEAN MESSES."

And Mr. Hoover will learn that fact before he finishes his term.

It is difficult to know why Mr. Hoover decided to go back upon the traditional policy of this country as maintained since the time of Washington, with the single exception of President Wilson, and mix the United States up in European messes.

It is hard to decide what influenced him; whether it was the international bankers to whom he was under certain obligations for his nomination, or whether it was his long residence abroad and his association with foreign nations.

Certainly it was not the wish for the welfare of the American people that influenced him, or the tradition of the nation since the foundation of the republic.

Certainly it was not the attitude and the utterances of the nation's great statesmen, including Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Jackson, Lincoln, Cleveland and Roosevelt.

The issue is fairly drawn between the public and the President, and the people should take the issue to the polls and fight it out there, beginning with the immediate senatorial elections and culminating with the election of a progressive Democratic Congress and a progressive Democratic President, if that is the only way in which this country can be kept to a traditionally American policy of MINDING ITS OWN BUSINESS.

Lost Air Mail Flier Is Found Dead

Cleveland, O., Dec. 5 (AP)—The formerly was a buddy of Col body of Pilot Thomas P. Nelson and his air mail plane, badly shattered were found this afternoon by a rabbit hunter near Chagrin Falls 35 miles southeast of here. Nelson met death early Monday morning while flying the air mail from Bellefont, Pa., to Cleveland in a heavy snowstorm.

Nelson's body had been hurled by terrific impact of the plane against the ground about 25 feet from the wreckage. Undoubtedly he was killed instantly.

The body was found by Joseph Vincent of Chagrin Falls, ending a three-day hunt made by fellow pilots over most of the northeastern Ohio and western Pennsylvania.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh had led 15 planes all this morning covering the section between Cleveland and Youngstown, north to Lake Erie, in frantic search for Nelson, not knowing whether he was dead or alive.

The wrecked plane was in a ravine hardly 25 feet from state highway 422, but was effectively concealed from searchers by the sides of the ravine and by the snow that covered it.

HOOVER POINTS TO 'WORK' AS KEYNOTE FOR AMERICAN BUSINESS

GIVE JOBS TO WORKERS, HE SAYS

administration to stabilize industry after the stock market disturbance were to a single end, that of assuring employment and to remove the fear of unemployment.

"The very fact that you gentlemen come together for these broad purposes," the president added "represents an advance in the whole conception of the relationship of business to public welfare.

"You represent the business of the United States, undertaking through your own voluntary action to contribute something very definite to the advancement of stability and progress in our economic right."

After reviewing steps which have been taken, the President declared that a "great responsibility for prosperity rests with the whole people." Another of his sentences said: "All of these efforts have one end—to assure employment and to remove the fear of unemployment."

REMOVE UNCERTAINTY.

The President said the large effect of the situation had been to create undue pessimism, fear, uncertainty and hesitation in business, adding:

"These emotions, being emotions, if they had been allowed to run their course would, by feeding on themselves create difficulties. The American mind is prone to revert to previous occasions when we were much less able to organize to meet such situations."

Such conditions, he asserted, can not be cured merely with words. "The cure for such storms is action," he added, and the cure for unemployment "is to find jobs."

"We have, fortunately, since our previous crashes established the Federal Reserve system. The first step in recovering confidence was made by the powerful effectiveness of that system, and the strong position of the banks, the result of which has been steadily diminishing interest rates, with a smooth, and rapid return into the channels of business of the money previously absorbed in the speculative market.

"This is a reversal of our historic experience and is a magnificent tribute to the system.

"The second action necessary to maintain progress was the standard set by leading employers that so far as they were concerned there would be no movement to reduce wages, and a corresponding acceptance from the leaders of labor that not only would they use their utmost influence to allay labor conflict, but would co-operate with the employers in the present situation.

"The third line of action has been to undertake through voluntary organization of industry the continuity and expansion of the construction and maintenance of work of the country, so as to take up any slack in employment which arises in other directions.

PROGRAM APPROVED.

"I am glad to report that such a program has met with universal approval of all those in responsible positions.

"It is to make this movement systematic in all branches of the industrial world that we are here—that is the task.

"Another of the great balance wheels of stability is our foreign trade. But in stimulating our exports we should be mainly interested in development work abroad such as roads and utilities, which increase the standards of living of people and thus the increased demand for goods from every nation, for we gain in prosperity by a prosperous world, not by displacing others.

"All of these efforts have one end—to assure employment and to remove the fear of unemployment.

Railroads to Spend Billion During Year

Washington, Dec. 5 (INS)—The major railroad systems of the country plan to carry out a billion dollar capital expenditure program during 1930, R. H. Ashton, president of the American Railway Association, reported to the national business conference today.

"In the past ten days," said Ashton, every Class I railroad in the United States has carefully revised its program and the aggregate of their budgets for the year 1930 follows:

"Equipment, $370,000,000.

"Roadway and structures, $680,000,000.

"Total, $1,050,000,000.

"It is estimated the first quarter will absorb $212,00,000, and the second quarter $278,000,000, or a total for the first six months of $490,000,000, as compared to $350,000,000 for the first six months of 1929."

SAYS B. & A. NOT TO JOIN N. E. MERGER

Consolidation of New England railroads is proceeding without any participation by the Boston & Albany railroad, today said President P. E. Crowley of the New York Central, at a members' luncheon at the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

"Whether the other New England roads wish to enter such an agreement," continued Mr. Crowley, "is their own business. We must prefer to continue to keep the Boston & Albany free and absolutely untrammeled."

He classed it as a mistake "to take this road with its record of service and with its fine traditions and its high morale, and thrust it into a common pot or merger with the other New England railroads."

The speaker extended his remarks on consolidation, in part, as follows:

"During the conferences of the four railroads which resulted in the development of the so-called 'Four Party Plan,' we did not undertake to deal with the New England situation. In the flood of suggestions for railroad consolidation, however, New England has not been left out of the picture.

"Various possible schemes—perhaps, the most interesting of them suggesting the bringing of all or most of the New England railroads into a single working unit—have been and are still being brought forth. Our interest in this consolidation plan for New England quite naturally is keen.

"As a carrier west of the Hudson river, with power and facilities second to none, the New York Central desires to continue in the future as in the past to keep its gateways into New England open, not merely to Boston, but to the other large seaports and industrial centers of the area it serves.

"Such was, of course, its purpose in originally leasing the Boston & Albany road. We of the Central are not insensible to the obvious merits of the port of Boston, and to the possibilities of its harbor. Those merits and possibilities, plus the natural industrial traffic of the entire territory hereabouts made us anxious in the first place to get the Boston & Albany, and make us anxious today not merely to retain it, but to develop it as it has been developed to its best possible efficiency as a rail carrier.

"For these reasons we are very jealous of the prestige and the position of this historic road. We feel that it should be kept, as it is being kept today, free and independent. Although technically leased to the New York Central, it is in name and in reality a really independent railroad, named in part at least—after Boston and operated from Boston. To obscure that name and that independent management in any general plan for a so-called terminal or gateway road here in New England would be, it seems to us, a mistake."

F. W. MANSFIELD COMMITTEE IS $12,000 'SHY'

Reports $55,000 Expended and Only $420 to Meet Outstanding Bills

The Frederick W. Mansfield political campaign committee had only $420.41 with which to meet outstanding bills of $12,754.67, it was revealed today.

In a report filed with Wilfred A. Doyle, city clerk, by Robert Homans, treasurer of the committee, on the last day for filing campaign expenditures, it was stated that $56,085.15 had been raised for Mansfield's campaign and $55,664.74 expended.

Homans listed more than 30 liabilities with the attached memo:

"Whether these bills or any of them were incurred by authority of the F. W. Mansfield political committee or whether that committee is in any way responsible therefore, or whether they are accurate, the undersigned does not undertake to state as he had no personal knowledge concerning them."

No indication was given as to whether or not the bills would be repudiated or paid.

The largest item is $3575 to the Morris Amplifying Service for amplifiers at meetings. Then there is $3098.66 to the Dickie-Raymond Co. for mail advertising, $590.78 rent at Parker House, and two items totalling $67.26 for radio at headquarters in the Lawyers' Building.

There is an item of $200 for advertising matches, and several sums due to sign companies.

Washington, Dec. 5 (AP)—Secretary Stimson said today that further action so far as the United States was concerned in the Chinese-Soviet situation in Manchuria has been closed with his public reply to Soviet allegations of unfriendliness in the secretary's move for peace.

Stimson said he viewed the efforts by the major powers under the leadership of the United States to bring about a cessation of hostilities as successful.

The secretary commented favorably on a report of the official Soviet agency Tass, which promptly published the results of the protocol signed between the two countries for adjustment of their dispute. He asserted the Soviet agency had touched upon the center of the quarrel, and he said such publication of both sides of the dispute had indicated a long step forward in bettering the whole situation.

heads can vision a situation under the conditions that have developed which might prove embarrassing to local industry. On the other hand such a merger effectively carried out with a view to lower rates and increased business has the endorsement of President Thomas Nelson Perkins, of the B. & M., and many others.

FIGHT FOR CONTROL

The New York Central's attitude toward a merger was clearly set forth by President P. E. Crowley at a Boston Chamber of Commerce luncheon today. "Whether the other New England roads wish to enter such an arrangement is, of course, their own business."

On the surface, then, it would appear that Pennsylvania and New York Central would fight it out for New England rail business, a situation that is not in accord with the desires of those who have been working to consolidate all New England lines.

The Boston & Maine president issued a new statement this noon, clearing up a situation clouded by conflicting reports.

PERKINS' STATEMENT

"We understand that the Pennsylvania Railroad or the Pennroad Corp. have bought a sizeable amount of Boston & Maine stock," Mr. Perkins said. "When I remarked recently to Gen. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, that I guessed the buying of our stock was by or for his railroad, he did not deny it. Beyond this silence, we have no knowledge of Pennsylvania ownership; but I should add that I believe the Pennsylvania Railroad or interests friendly to it today own something less than 20 per cent of our outstanding capital stock.

"The New Haven railroad for many years has had large holdings in the Boston & Maine; but there has been no intimation in any official quarter of any attempt to combine the New Haven and the Pennsylvania interests to control this railroad.

LET GOVERNORS DECIDE

"Consolidation of New England railroads may or may not eventuate, but I believe that if and when it does it should be along the lines which may be agreed upon by the governors of New England states after being advised by report from their committee which is now considering the subject."

It is expected the New England situation will be widely discussed when the New Britain, Ct., Traffic Association holds its sixth annual banquet. President J. J. Pelley of the New Haven, President Percy R. Todd of the Bangor & Aroostook and Vice-President N. W. Hawks of the Boston & Maine are scheduled speakers, the last named on the program to discuss consolidation.

DOLORES SUED BY ATTORNEY

Los Angeles, Dec. 3 (AP)—Dolores del Rio, motion picture actress, is defendant in a suit for $21,000 filed by Gunther Lessing, attorney. Lieut. Ralph Snyder, making a tour of inspection at the island today, discovered the absence of the operators and communicated with the navy yard at Boston.

A navy tug immediately left Boston to hunt for the power dory and two planes were ordered from Squantum. Four 75-foot patrol boats were sent from the Gloucester base.

The Gander Deal apparently was one of the Newfoundland fishing fleet which was caught in the storm soon after setting out from St. John's, Newfoundland, on Monday.

Fifteen of these schooners were swept out to sea. A few of them fought their way back to port, and the crews of others were rescued by boats put out from shore.

1556 MILES AT SEA

From the laconic message there leased by Capt. M. Moore of the Republic was pieced out a story of sea luck that has rarely had a parallel.

The Gander Deal, apparently unequipped with wireless and reduced to derelict state by the lashing of the gale, was drifting uncontrolled in latitude north, longitude 40.44 west, approximately 1556 miles east of Ambrose lightship, when she was sighted by the Republic.

The rescue was effected just at dawn today. Whether lights strung up on the schooner's mast were sighted from the Republic, or whether the tiny vessel was seen from the bridge of the passenger liner, is not known.

IN NICK OF TIME

But apparently in the nick of time the grateful captain and his exhausted crew of ten were taken aboard the liner. The fact that Capt. Moore reported the schooner a derelict shows how close was the fishermen's escape.

For had not the vessel been near to plunging to the bottom, Capt. Moore would not have abandoned her. It is extremely likely she sank soon after the Republic steamed away with the 11 men snatched from a watery grave.

to call its remaining witnesses, because it believed the court's remarks that its evidence would only be "cumulative," and would not directly connect the defendant with the crime were "ground."

Defense Attorney James D. C. Murray then moved for dismissal of the case.

Before directing the verdict Judge Nott commented on "the obvious hostility" of the state's witnesses, and said he sympathized with the district attorney. The witnesses were of an undesirable element and many did not have a proper appreciation of their duty to witnesses under oath, he said.

"The law of circumstantial evidence is clear and simple, however," he said. "It is not sufficient to prove that a man might have committed a crime, it is necessary to prove that he must have done so."

The judge added that in his opinion that had not been done in the McManus case and that the court, therefore, would take from the jury the responsibility of rendering a verdict.

Under the directed verdict McManus can never be brought to trial on that charge—that he shot to death his gambler associate a year ago last November 4.

"The commission desires to express its thanks for their co-operation to the many companies which responded to its request."

HARD WORK KEEPS HIM IN FORM

Reveals Bright Spots in a Busy Life in His Birthday Interview

First among the really great men Cardinal O'Connell has known, His Eminence places his saintly predecessor, the Most Rev. John J. Williams, D. D.

"Archbishop Williams," His Eminence said today in the Cardinal's birthday interview, which has come to be a Boston custom, "was one of the noblest men I have been privileged to know.

"I should place him first on my roll of the truly great."

His Eminence the Cardinal will be 70 years of age on Sunday, the feast of the Immaculate Conception, when he will celebrate a pontifical high mass in the Cathedral of the Holy Cross. In anticipation of the anniversary, he received newspapermen three days ahead of time.

NAMES TWO POPES

Asked to name the "first three" among the outstanding figures he has known in a busy and widely traveled life, Cardinal O'Connell named Archbishop Williams, fourth Bishop and first Archbishop of Boston; Pope Leo XIII, and Pope Pius X.

Leo XIII, the Cardinal calls "the greatest intellect, the man of highest mental gifts" with whom he has been acquainted.

Pius X., he declared, was "the holiest man I ever met."

Although at one point in today's interview Cardinal O'Connell spoke of beginning "to see the shadows lengthen," it was the opinion of interviewers that he is the most youthful looking man of 70 in the public life of New England. His birthday, he reported, finds him in the "very best of health."

It was an unusual interview in more respects than one. In the first place, interviews with the Cardinal are highly prized not only because of his position as the senior prelate among the American hierarchy, and the importance of the See of Boston in population and institutions, but because they can be had but seldom.

And in the second place, the interview was in two parts, the interviewers first suggesting some of the topics they desired His Eminence to touch upon, and then, after an interval of two days, returning to the Diocesan office in Lake st. to be given the combined interview by dictation.

3 OTHER GREATS

Perhaps because it was asked and answered "off the record," so to speak, there is no reference in the statement which follows to the interesting query of one reporter who, observing that Cardinal O'Connell had selected three churchmen as his "greatest three," asked His Eminence if he would not similarly designate three non-churchmen.

Cardinal O'Connell promptly gave the names of Andre Tardieu, premier of France; Prince Bernhard von Buelow, Germany's "second Bismarck," and Ferdinand of Bavaria.

Cardinal O'Connell gave an outline of his daily routine, named the establishment of 100 new parishes as the outstanding accomplishment of his years in Boston, reported that there are at least thirteen nationalities in the archdiocese, and declared that his regime has been blessed with complete harmony and by sound and broad growth and is altogether in splendid condition.

Every step upward in his career in the Church, His Eminence revealed in the first public reference he is known to have made to the subject, came to him "unsolicited and even without previous notice."

Because of the manner in which he interview was put together, the Boston Evening American is pleased to be able to present it in the more dignified form of an article, as follows:

By WILLIAM CARDINAL O'CONNELL

Archbishop of Boston.

My seventieth birthday finds me in the very best of health, thank God. Thirty years ago I made a walking trip through Switzerland, covering anywhere from 15 to 20 miles a day, almost consecutively for a full month. The other day, the memory of it came back to me and just for my own satisfaction I started out after breakfast—that is 7:30, and walked continuously until 1 o'clock, covering, I imagine some 12 miles. I am happy to state that at the end of the walk I did not feel the least fatigued.

What is the secret, you ask?

There is no secret, for I suppose everybody knows that, given a sound organism, plenty of hard work, physical and mental, as little food as possible compatible with health and sufficient rest, is the best method of keeping in fit condition.

There is no secret in the remedy. The only secret is in putting it into operation. That requires firm will.

I am never so happy as when I have a full day's occupation before

Threescore Years and Ten

"With strength still vigorous, willing to face whatever the future may hold in store for me, my faith in God is still most secure, and in that Holy Light I shall walk until I can neither see nor do more."

AFTER seventy years of what I can accurately describe as a very laborious life, in which I can honestly say I have not spared myself in the attempt, at least, to answer as best I may the call which came to me, forty-five years ago as a Priest, twenty-eight years ago as a Bishop, twenty-two years ago as an Archbishop and eighteen years ago as a Cardinal, no one better than myself realizes the infinitude of my unworthiness and the immense lack in my ability to realize fully my highest aspirations in word, work and deed.

But I can honestly say that I did my best: I preached and wrote and worked without ceasing and only God knows what difficulties frequently beset me.

GIVEN a good sound organism, plenty of hard work, physical and mental, as little food as possible compatible with health, and sufficient rest, is the best method of keeping in condition.

IF you want to know the work that I have considered the best and most lasting accomplished by me, I would say at once it is the establishment of one hundred new Parishes.

WE have now about one thousand Priests... and about one million people.

AS I look back, I can easily recall the memory of some of the really great men who have impressed themselves upon me, especially in my earlier years. Of all these, I have no hesitation in placing in the very first rank my own predecessor, ARCHBISHOP WILLIAMS. As I begin now to see the shadows lengthen, I have a deeper and truer appreciation of him as one of the noblest men I ever had the privilege of knowing.

THE greatest intellect I ever met, in other words the man of highest mental gifts, was Leo XIII . . . the statesman, Pope and the philosopher as well.

HIS successor was the holiest man I ever met —Pius X. Saintliness beamed from his face. . . . His arm was a rugged, simple honesty, administered with the gentleness of Christ.

LIKE a good soldier, all my life I have accepted orders from my superiors and obeyed them faithfully to the best of my ability.

Off to Find Rubber in Golden Rod

West Orange, N. J., Dec. 5—Thomas A. Edison leaves his home here today to continue at Ft. Myers, Fla., his experiments in the production of rubber from the common golden rod plant, as well as experiments with other plants from which rubber might be produced.

Edison is leaving for Florida earlier in the season than ever before, largely, it was said, because of his eagerness to make progress in his work to seeking a new source of rubber supply in the United States, to which he is devoting the major share of his attention.

Of all the thousands of varieties of plants with which Edison has experimented as a possible additional source, golden rod has been found most satisfactory and best suited for possible commercial production of rubber, according to his secretary, William H. Meadowcroft.

In making this statement, Meadowcroft denied stories circulated through a news agency that he had announced for Edison that golden rod yields the elements of rubber in commercially profitable quantities, and that by the use of golden rod a manufactured rubber could be produced commercially for approximately 16 cents a pound.

Although Edison is doing considerable work with golden rod, he has not yet made any estimates of possible cost of production, or decided on the commercial possibilities of such production, Meadowcroft said.

The only mention of cost, Meadowcroft said, was that Edison showed a sample of artificial rubber sent him from England, and said that the price of 75 cents a pound for this would not compare favorably with a selling price of 16 cents for crude rubber and that the product was, therefore, impractical at present.

Edison has been working for some time on the rubber problem, seeking a plant containing the basic elements that could be grown quickly and in great quantity in the United States so that in case of emergency the country would not be without a rubber supply.

Donnell staggered out of the room as the clubhouse became a mass of flames. He released 45 decoy ducks and wild geese, which flew away honking loudly.

TWO BOATMEN CAPTAIN LOSES ARE DROWNED HAND AT SEA

Portland, Me., Dec. 5 (AP)—Finding today of a foundering rowboat revealed that two men had been drowned yesterday in Portland harbor. The body of Mel Davis, waterfront worker, was recovered. Identity of his companion and the circumstances of the drownings remained a mystery.

The rowboat was found by H. H. Whiting and his son, scallop fishermen. Hauling on the painter, they pulled up the body of Davis. The line was twisted about his legs.

Capt. William Mitchell, watchman aboard the large Barwick, reported that he saw the two men sink in the water yesterday. His distress signal was answered by a harbor gasoline boat, which could find no trace of them.

Scant-Clad, He Works on Roof at Near Zero

While Silas S. Kent, assistant engineer of the Locks & Canals Co. of Lowell, was predicting an unusually severe winter, Joseph Laponis of Elliott st., Milton, was maintaining an "I should worry" attitude as he continued to work in his undershirt on the roof of the new Milton telephone exchange building with the temperature at 12 degrees above zero.

Laponis considers zero weather just right for working at his trade of waterproofing roofs. Although not perspiring, he felt quite comfortable, he told persons bundled up in fur coats who stopped to watch him.

The prediction of Mr. Kent that unusually severe weather will be experienced is based upon records compiled by his company for many years.

He says the average maximum temperature in Lowell for the first five days of December was 31.2, the lowest since 1896, when it was 30.4.

A drop of 24 degrees in six hours was reported from Woodsville, N. H., where it was 2 degrees below zero at 6 a. m. At midnight the mercury stood at 22 above.

Slightly warmer, clear weather was promised Bostonians by the official forecaster today. No storms are in sight that will affect the Hub, he said. The minimum temperature in Boston today was 22 at 7 a. m., but will be several degrees higher tonight, he predicts.

For cast for Boston and vicinity: Fair tonight and Friday; slightly warmer tonight; moderate southwest to west winds. The minimum temperature tonight will be near 28 above.

STORM SWEEPS BRITISH ISLES; ERIN SUFFERS

Big Ships Damaged; English Channel Too Rough to Navigate

London, Dec. 5 (AP)—A terrific gale swept the British Isles during the night. The wind at times reached a velocity of 90 miles an hour and there was material damage, but thus far no loss of life has been reported.

The gale swept across Ireland in full force, felled trees and small buildings in Wales, Cornwall and Devonshire, and then hit the London district.

Seaports on the eastern and southern coasts reported a heavy sea running and torrential rains. At Hull walls of buildings were blown in and trawlers returned to port in battered condition. The boisterous conditions in the Channel caused shipping to tie up.

Lloyd's said a steamer, the Valencia, bound from Antwerp to New York, wireless[ed] she was hove to with steering gear damaged. The Landsend wireless station received reports from the French steamer Cambronne, the British steamer Rowanburn and the Danish Helena, all of which were damaged.

The ship in trouble off Portheawl was the Spanish steamer Guecho with a broken propeller. Two tugs also went to assist her.

OUT OF POLITICS DECLARES MISS PANKHURST

Washington, Dec. 5 (AP)—Miss Christabel Pankhurst of London, once a militant suffragette, and here to pay tribute in a Sunday memorial service to her militant mother, the late Emmeline Pankhurst, is through with politics forever.

"To sit in Parliament would be but an anti-climax. The great thing was breaking down the barriers," she said.

While other girls her age were going to gay parties, she besieged Parliament.

"I am not sorry," she said. "I had something to show for my time at the end of it. The greatest transformation that has ever taken place in human affairs was the emancipation of women. But in 1918, when we got the vote, my part in politics was done. I quite closed the chapter of my life. No political work could be so epoch-making as getting the recognition."

Miss Pankhurst is now a lecturer on religious subjects. The Pankhurst service Sunday, to be held in the capital, will be memorable to the National Woman's party as a feature of its national convention.

Says Business Men Quit on Pledges

Portland, Me., Dec. 5—In tendering his formal resignation to the board of managers of the Portland Chamber of Commerce, Arthur H. Andrews, secretary, who came here from New Bedford three years ago, scored many of the business men who, he said had failed to live up to the financial pledges they made, and thus severely hampered the work of the organization.

He also said that Portland and every community of importance has suffered as a result of the almost insane insistance on the part of some residents that by far the most important object of a chamber of commerce should be the stealing of industries from other cities.

LOSES LIQUOR CARGO IN WRECK

Colchester, Vt., Dec. 5 (AP)—John J. Gorman of Bennington escaped injury here when his car side-swiped a gasoline filling station, after crossing a bridge and plunged 30 feet down an embankment into a brook, but his cargo did not.

Pursuing customs officers only stopped long enough in inspecting the wreckage to estimate that there must have been about 15 cases of liquor in Gorman's machine and then pressed on in search of their man. Gorman was caught a mile from the scene and brought to St. Albans for arraignment before the U. S. commissioners. The officers said they had chased Gorman six miles from a point 20 miles south of the border.

BULLITT SUES WIFE, EX-WIDOW OF JOHN REED

Philadelphia, Dec. 5 (AP)—William C. Bullitt, widely known newspaperman, diplomat and author, has filed an action here for divorce from Mrs. Anne Moen Louise Bryant Reed Bullitt, charging her with "personal indignities."

Aspects of the case have been concealed, even the whereabouts of both. The Bullitts were married in 1923 and have one daughter, Anne Moen Bullitt.

Mrs. Bullitt was the widow of John Reed, radical agitator, leader of the Communist party in America and one-time war correspondent who died in Moscow, Russia, in October, 1920, after his pronounced views on Communism had led to his arrest on several occasions in the United States.

Bullitt, who at present is managing editor of a large motion picture corporation, became in 1915, at the age of 24, assistant in the United States Department of State and two years later was an attache of the American commission to negotiate peace.

During 1918-19 Bullitt was on a special mission to Soviet Russia to investigate conditions for the government. In September, 1919, while testifying before the Senate foreign relations committee he said that Secretary of State Lansing believed the peace treaty "bad."

VOTE ON VARE IS DUE TODAY

Washington, Dec. 5 (AP)—After three years of intermittent controversy, a vote was imminent today on whether William S. Vare is to be seated as Senator from Pennsylvania or barred because of excessive expenditures in the Republican state primary in 1926.

The decisive action was expected to come in balloting on a resolution by Senator Norris (Rep.) of Nebraska, which would refuse Vare a seat because of the sums expended—more than $700,000—in the contest for the party nomination.

'Lonely' Widow, 69, Adopts Man, 27

New York, Dec. 5 (AP)—Because she is lonely and feels the need of a protector in her old age, a 69-year-old widow who has $750,000 in property and a yearly income of $25,000, has adopted a 27-year-old college student as her son.

Mrs. Lisa W. Sandford, a descendant of an old New York family, said the adoption of Haronig Bston, an Armenian, had the full approval of her daughter, now on her way home from abroad. She explained the daughter would continue to be the principal beneficiary in her estate at her death.

Bston came to America in 1923. He is a student at Columbia University.

"I have known him for five or six years," she said. "I have become much attached to him. I regard him as a wonderful young man."

CHERISHES MEMORY OF 2 POPES

Intimate Birthday Interview Given by His Eminence as He Reaches 70th Year

me, and when the day's work is done to the best of my ability I close the door against worry and I find delightful company in my books and my music.

My hours, which are invariable, are from 6 o'clock in the morning until half-past 10 at night, with every moment occupied; no siesta, but a good long walk after luncheon.

I think it can be truthfully said that the amount of correspondence of real importance, and the problems which reach me, whether by letter or by interview, age each day of such nature and quantity as to demand all my time and all my effort until they are finished, decided, settled and set aside.

I have excellent aids, just enough to help and not be in the way. There is the most perfect harmony and understanding between myself and those about me; and that, of course, makes the wheels go round smoothly.

HIS GREATEST TASK

If you want to know the work I consider the best and most lasting I would say at once it is the establishment of 100 new Parishes, bringing the Presence of the Blessed Sacrament, together with the Mass, to 100 communities which had been deprived of at least the facilities which these new establishments have brought them.

Next, I would put the work of the Seminary.

Having been the rector of a seminary (the North American College in Rome), the work of preparing levites for the altar is one particularly dear to me.

I was faced at the beginning of my regime with the absolute need for a change of management in the seminary. It was a disagreeable task, but it had to be done. I faced that and accomplished it as I have tried to do in everything else. Once having decided that the difficulty was inevitable, and that the change was necessary as a clear duty, I set about accomplishing it without unnecessary friction, but facing whatever disagreeable circumstances might arise, impersonally but conclusively. The change, once accomplished, proved the complete wisdom of Pius X, by whose direction it was undertaken.

After the seminary, the work I have done in clearing up the financial situation, and putting the Diocesan institutions on sound economic basis, is one which now is well known to all.

At the beginning of my regime I found many of them hopelessly plunged in debt, with poor buildings and poorer equipment. At present, they are practically clear of debt; many have splendid, in fact, first-class buildings, and the best equipment that can be obtained.

My only regret is that more of our people do not realize what a wonderful work is being done in these institutions under their very eyes. But I know the work at first hand, for I am constantly visiting one or another of the institutions and keeping in close touch with economic conditions.

1000 PRIESTS

As for the diocese in general, I think every man of affairs will agree that the mere business, financial and economic direction of a diocese so vast, and with such a complexity of interests, would demand ordinarily the services of three or four executives in the business world. But as I give all my time and effort to it, I have it fully in hand, with every item recorded and every change and improvement noted in my office books, in such a way that at a moment's notice I can place my finger upon every detail of any portion of the diocese.

We have now about 1000 priests under the direction and jurisdiction of the archbishop and about 1,000,000 people. No more unselfish or capable body of men exists anywhere than our clergy. To imagine that 1000 men, every one of them above average mental ability and of a keen sense of responsibility, would ever and under all circumstances always be entirely of the same point of view, is utopian.

There is this to say, however, and I say it with full deliberation, that, humanly speaking, there is complete harmony and the most satisfactory bond of co-operation with the head of the diocese.

There are at least thirteen distinct nationalities and races within the boundaries of the archdiocese of Boston. I think I may well feel proud and happy to say that all, without distinction, are working in unison and whole-hearted co-operation with me.

RESENTS ENMITY

Never once have I had any difficulty worth noticing with any of them. I can honestly say that they all manifest toward me complete confidence, trust and, I hope, affection.

All the new-comers have joined with those who had been here before them; each group stimulating the other, in a noble sort of rivalry without envious competition. Most of that, of course, is due to the good will of these dear spiritual children of mine, to their real Catholic sentiment and devotion; and without violating the canons of modesty I can claim at least a small share in this very remarkable—I might say unique—condition.

They are all the same to me, all equally dear. No one group has a monopoly of all the good qualities or of all the failing. They are all children of Adam equally, and in that they show their diversity; but they are also devoted and loyal children of Holy Mother Church, and in this they manifest their phenomenal unity.

As a father, my first duty is to look after the interests of my spiritual family—that is, of my diocese, the priests and faithful—not only in a spiritual way but as far as consistent in a temporal and material way. That is simply the duty of every faith r towards his family.

As the head of this family I resent and deplore any outside wranglers and disturbers of the peace in attempting to project within my household the dissension and disunion of which they unhappily seem to be forever the cause, wherever they are. I have lived all over the world and I have learned that humanity is much the same everywhere.

You can make trouble anytime; only madmen are proud of this sort of ability.

PROUD OF RECORD

To create peace and harmony and to maintain it for years with the elements of friction always just within reach, is a task worthy of the best kind of spiritual government, and of the highest human intelligence.

Looking back, I am happy to record that never in my whole life have I incurred a reprimand or even a correction from any legitimate superior; that is, one under whose government or jurisdiction I hold my office.

That applies even to the present day, and I may well be proud of the record.

Indeed, I think that if some success has followed my work in life much is due to the fact that, whether it appeared or not on the surface, and whether I was free to give reasons or not, I performed what I had to do under the direction of those to whom I was responsible.

In fact, like a good soldier, all my life I have accepted orders from my superiors and obeyed them faithfully to the best of my ability. I have been a good servant, even if I do say it; and the saying is that only one who has learned to obey may be trusted to command.

Because I have unflinchingly followed that attitude I cannot tolerate its opposite in others, whether under my jurisdiction or outside of it.

In a word, everything considered, my regime has certainly been blessed by God in three principal ways.

First, complete harmony: I am not thinking now of the rare exceptional individuals who never could bring themselves into harmony with anybody.

Second, sound and broad growth in numbers of institutions, schools and churches.

Third, an extraordinarily fine financial and economical condition built up by patient and insistent economy, wiping out an enormous indebtedness and almost hopeless depression.

Regime Is Blessed

IN a word, everything considered, my regime, has certainly been blessed by God in three principal ways:

First, complete harmony. I am not thinking now of the rare exceptional individuals who never could bring themselves into harmony with anybody.

Second, sound and broad growth in numbers of institutions, schools and churches.

Third, an extraordinarily fine financial and economical condition built up by patient and insistent economy, wiping out an enormous indebtedness and almost hopeless depression.

ARCHBISHOP GREATEST

As I look back, I can easily recall the memory of some of the really great men who have impressed themselves upon me, especially in my earlier years.

Of all these, I have no hesitation in placing the very front rank my predecessor, Archbishop Williams.

I have seen him under the most trying circumstances, when those upon whom he had relied had either deceived or disappointed him. That, as anyone can realize, is a gruelling test of patience and faith in humanity. He bore the test with a nobility of soul worthy of a saint. He kept it in his memory, of course, but it created neither rancor nor reproof.

PITIED THE WEAK

Toward the end, he revealed something of all this to me, feeling it was a duty that his successor should know something of the facts; but he kept it under lock and key to the world. And, let me add in parentheses, I am doing the same.

I have never known him to act from purely selfish motives. He invariably gave full credit where credit was due—and when discredit was due he said nothing beyond what was his sacred duty to express.

Though in his earlier years he was quick-tempered and brusque toward those who irritated him by neglect of duty, the years brought a calm and equanimity that it seemed nothing could disturb.

He detested cant and made no display of what was his innermost spiritual life.

Pretense never deceived him; he merely looked away, with a face as placid as it was inscrutable.

Few knew both the number and quality of difficulties which presented themselves to him as Bishop and Archbishop of this Archdiocese. Fewer still could even suspect it from any word or attitude of his. His best efforts did not escape the harsh criticism of those who never can build, but only destroy. Even this met no verbal reproof; but, knowing all the facts, he only pitied those who judged harshly in their ignorance of all that he alone could know.

I think toward the end he became quite indifferent to human judgment and even shrank a little from human companionship. He had been deceived and disappointed too often to do otherwise.

In his earliest days as Bishop he was fond of his friends and loved to have them around him. As time went on and death took its toll, he found himself practically alone, wrapped in the silent memories of days that had faded. Then, men thought he was stoical and aloof; he was neither of these to those who understood him best.

LASTING MEMORIES

His memory will always be a sacred treasure to me. As I begin now to see the shadows lengthen I have a deeper and truer appreciation of him as one of the noblest men I ever had the privilege of knowing. While I was alone with him in his last moments he placed his hand upon my head and with his blessing left an inheritance which I shall revere until the end.

The greatest intellect I ever met, in other words the man of highest mental gifts, was Leo XIII., the Pope of Encyclicals, as he is called.

Everybody knows the story of this wonderful patriarch, who lived to be 93 and died mourned by the whole world.

I shall never forget that day in the Vatican when I saw these two great men sitting side by side in the library of the Pope. I had, only a few months before, taken up my Rectorship of the North American College in Rome.

I accompanied Archbishop Williams to the Pope's ante-chamber. The Archbishop entered alone for his audience. That finished, Leo XIII sent for me. I entered, and the sight of those two patriarchs with whitened hair, each with the cares of his own world upon his shoulders, will never leave my memory.

Evidently they had been discussing me.

As I knelt to the Pontiff and bowed to the Archbishop, the Pope took my hand, and turning to His Grace said: "He is very young for such a burden." (I was 34, but he considered anyone under 60 to be a mere youth.)

To this His Grace replied, smilingly: "He will grow old in time, and you, Holy Father, will help him with his burden." ... The rest is enshrined in my heart, but that picture will never fade.

Leo XIII. was the statesman Pope and the philosopher as well. His successor was the HOLIEST man I ever met—Pius.

Saintliness beamed from his face.

He never pretended to great statesmanship and yet he was, in a certain sense, even a greater statesman than Leo XIII.

'I'VE DONE MY BEST'

He cared little for diplomacy as it is practised in the diplomatic world, HIS arm was a rugged, simple honesty, administered with the gentleness of Christ.

I cannot here go into the details of our sacred relationship, which was intimate to a degree that I cannot reveal in words. As a young bishop I was permitted a closeness of approach which was the rarest sort of privilege.

He was engulfed, just at that time, the beginning of his Pontificate, in a world of difficulties and trials, some of them entering even into his very household. It seemed to be a relief to him, who rarely, if ever, revealed them to others, to speak to me quite openly, frankly and intimately. The revelation wrung my heart. Then, the next day, I would see him enthroned in all the external glory of his Pontificate and only the melancholy of his eyes half revealed the depth of his trials. From my contact with him I felt in the presence of a Saint.

In years, that conviction has grown, which now all the world shares.

These, as I look back, are the three greatest men, from three different points of view, that I ever had the privilege to know well and intimately.

Their memory is a daily comfort and help. Now, after 50 years of what I can accurately describe as a very laborious life, in which I can honestly say I have not spared myself in the slightest at least, my answer as best I may the call which came to me 45 years ago as a Priest, 28 years ago as a Bishop, 22 years ago as an Archbishop and 18 years ago as a Cardinal, no one better than myself realizes the infinitude of my unworthiness and the immense lack in my ability to realize fully my highest aspirations in word, work and deed.

But I can honestly say that I did my best; I preached and wrote and worked without ceasing, and only God knows what difficulties frequently beset me. In all this I am weighing, not my judgment, but that of those who by action and document rewarded what they considered worthy of recognition and praise. The rest is God's.

Finally, I wish to make the statement, which is incontrovertible as a fact, that after my priesthood, every single step upward has come to me unsolicited certainly, and even without previous notice of what the good God and the Church have conferred upon my humble person.

I make this statement knowing full well how many false interpretations are put upon such declarations. That concerns me not at all.

Unwarned, unsolicited, without previous knowledge even, I have become one after the other Rector of the North American College in Rome, Bishop of Portland, Papal Envoy to the Emperor of Japan, Archbishop of Boston, Cardinal of the Holy Roman Catholic Church.

Let this evidence stand in its nakedness of truth as a testimony which, I trust, true history will note and register.

With strength still vigorous, will-ing to face whatever the future may hold in store for me, my faith in God is still most secure, and in the Holy Light I shall walk until I can neither see nor do no more.

BELIEVE 'DEAD' BROTHER ALIVE, HELD CAPTIVE

Worcester, Dec. 5—Belief that their brother is alive and held captive by persons dissipating his $200,000 estate was expressed today by the sisters of Charles B. Duffy, reported to have died in Chicago, August 7.

Both Miss Alice M. Duffy and Mrs. Mary Hartlene reiterated today their assurance that the body sent on from Chicago and now reposing in a vault at Hope Cemetery is not that of their brother.

"I feel certain that my brother is not dead, that the story of his death is a ruse and that the body sent to us is that of some unidentified man taken from a morgue by the plotters who hold my brother a prisoner while they loot his estate," said Miss Duffy.

She will go to Chicago in an attempt to learn the truth.

Both women feel that the telegram notifying them of the death, which was sent from Oklahoma by "Mrs. C. B. Duffy" is part of the plot, an attempt to make them think their brother's estate would go to his widow. They declare that he was married once, but that his wife died years ago.

Trousseau War Stirs Fashion Centers

Paris, Dec. 5—Paris and Brussels are at war, with the trousseau of a princess as the stake.

The French dressmaking capital and the Belgian lacemaking center are each bidding for the honor of dressing Princess Marie Jose of Belgium, who weds Crown Prince Humbert in Rome next month.

There are stories from Brussels that widows and orphans are hard at work on a task of love, weaving delicate threads into a piece of wonder lace which is to go into the bridal gown of the favorite princess.

At the same time bearded dressmakers of the Rue De La Paix have let it be known that they, too, are making bridal gowns for the charming Marie Jose.

If the princess wore all the bridal gowns that allegedly are being made for her, she would have to change dresses a dozen times during the ceremony.

The Royal Court of Belgium maintains a discreet silence. No one knows the intentions of Queen Elizabeth, and it is certain that she, and not the princess will select the bridal attire.

The Belgium family has dressed in Paris for long. Crown Prince Leopold brought Crown Princess Astrid here to select several ceremonial dresses to wear during the festivities in Rome. Longer skirts, but not of the floor-sweeping variety, are favored by the crown princess.

Belgium would feel slighted if Marie Jose went to the altar in any but Belgian lace.

Just who will make the nightgowns is a mystery.

Canadian Premier Tells Tariff Stand

London, Ont., Dec. 5 (AP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King, in an address here tonight, said that Canada believed in "minding its own business" instead of "projecting itself" into the tariff controversy in the United States, but he added Canada would take steps to meet the situation if the United States changed its tariff so as to injure the Dominion.

He added that the Canadian government had "not been offensive" in making its position known to the United States.

IS GIVEN A YEAR FOR PERJURY IN POOL PROBE

New York, Dec. 5 (AP)—James J. Otto, former head of the Albany baseball pool, who was convicted yesterday of perjury, today was sentenced to a year and a day in Atlanta federal penitentiary by Judge Alfred Coxe.

Otto was convicted by a jury for having given false testimony last February before the federal grand jury which was investigating the Albany pool in an attempt to learn the identity of the "higher ups" alleged to have been connected with its activities.

He specifically was charged with having shielded Daniel P. O'Connell, Albany Democratic boss, in his testimony before the jury, stating that he knew nothing about O'Connell's connection with the pool.

Oil Companies to Urge Production Cut

Chicago, Dec. 5 (AP)—Directors of the American Petroleum Institute, meeting in connection with the tenth annual convention of the organization, today announced they had sent Capt. J. F. Lucey, of the Lucey Petroleum Company, Dallas, Texas, to President Hoover's business conference with instructions to state that the oil industry must practice even further curtailment in production.

Mrs. Tellegen Is Granted Divorce

Los Angeles, Dec. 5 (AP)—Mrs. Isabel Craven Tellegen, actress, today held a final decree of divorce from Lou Tellegen. She also was given custody of their 5-year-old son, Rex. The Tellegens were married in Rutherford, N. J., December 17, 1923. In her complaint Mrs. Tellegen said her husband admitted infidelity, at the same time making similar charges falsely against her. Tellegen previously was married to Geraldine Farrar, opera singer.

Says Miracles Fail as Interest Wanes

Chicago, Dec. 5—Dr. Charles Mayo of Rochester, Minn., in a luncheon address said "miracle cures" would remain cured as long as they continued objects of public wonder.

"We still have with us the age of miracles and superstition," he said. "In Massachusetts thousands of people daily visited the grave of a young ecclesiastic who died 60 years ago. Those who visited the grave believe it is just as effective for cure of one disease as another.

"There will always be apparent cures of this type, because many persons with uncontrolled emotions only think they are sick. They throw away crutches or canes or smoked glasses. While they are objects of wonder, they will remain better, but when they have to go to work again their disabilities return."

Regarding heredity as a foremost factor in health, Dr. Mayo declared the diseases most dangerous to a man are those of which his parents died.

"Knowing this," he said, "if he has a good inheritance he can destroy it by lack of care of his health. Our control of health would be to find out our tendency to disease at an early enough period to prevent or delay its action."

RASKOB LAUDS WHITE HOUSE PARLEYS

Washington, Dec. 5—John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee, declared that business is sound at the base and by early spring, perhaps March or April, it would again go into high gear, after a period of arrested speed due to the recent disturbance in the New York stock market.

He commended President Hoover's business conferences as a "constructive" step and one that is likely to have a healthy psychological effect on all lines of industrial and commercial activity.

"President Hoover's action in bringing leaders together to take stock of the situation was constructive and a move in the right direction," said Raskob. "Anything that could be done under such conditions to restore confidence

Girl Admits Theft of Goods by Use of Charge Check

Barbara Allen, 21 who told the court she was single and lived in Griggs pl., Allston, pleaded guilty before Judge Francis Good today to larceny of $300 in merchandise from a department store through use of another person's charge coin.

At the request of Inspector Francis Mullens, who told the court an inventory of the account was expected to show a loss of $850, the case was continued until December 16.

A woman probation officer declared she believed the young woman is married and infatuated with another man and the court directed that an investigation be made.

3 INTERNES ILL WITH SEPTIC POISONING

Dr. Edward Edwards, Dr. Carl De Prizio and Dr. Alexander Aiken, all near the end of their internships at the institution, are confined to beds.

The name of Dr. Edwards, the first of the three to be affected, is on the danger list. His condition was so serious for a time that attending physicians were afraid that it would be necessary to amputate his right hand.

Reports given out at the hospital, however, declared that the infection had been checked.

Dr. DePrizio, the second victim, was ordered to bed when infection had entered his left hand and spread the entire length of his arm. Doctors and nurses are striving to halt its progress with poultices and hot baths. The fact that the doctor's temperature has remained normal is considered encouraging.

Dr. Aiken was admitted as a patient suffering from an infected hand, but it is thought that his condition is not as serious as that of the other two.

Dr. Jerves L. Golden declared that the start of the infection could not be attributed to any one case in particular as there was no case on which all three doctors had worked. Lack of resistance, due to overwork and loss of sleep, he said, left the victims susceptible to the infection.

SAYS U. S. WILL LEAD WORLD IN FLYING

Washington, Dec. 5 (AP)—A forecast that it is only a question of time until the United States will lead the world in air passenger traffic was made today in the annual report of the national advisory committee for aeronautics, submitted to Congress by President Hoover.

"America is producing the requisite technical knowledge," the report said, "to improve the safety and efficiency of aircraft, also to bring this about without direct cash subsidies, and for the further reason that the Nation's great area will make an important factor of the time to be saved by air travel."

The country was shown to be leading in several phases of aviation, abreast of other nations in some respects, but lagging definitely behind in many developments.

America leads the world, the committee reported, in the use of aircraft for commercial purposes, in the extent and lighting of airways, in weather report service, in the development of radio communication and directional finding facilities, in air mail transportation in crop dusting and forest patrol from the air and in the development of cowling for air-cooled engines and engine starters.

CHILDREN NOT HIS, SAYS MAN GONE 10 YEARS

A desertion and non-support case of unusual circumstances will come up for disposition in the superior court Friday.

Rand C. Heustis of St. Stephens st., Back Bay, a private detective, has been arrested after a 10-year search, charged with desertion and non-support of five children whose parentage he denies.

Police stated that the superior court cases would be not pressed within a few days, due to the inability of police to locate Mrs. Elizabeth Heustis, mother of the children, complainant in the case, who is also wanted on a warrant charging her with desertion of the children.

A new warrant charging Heustis with non-support of the children for the past eight years was issued in West Roxbury court Monday.

$165,000 Worth of the Most Beautiful FUR COAT Fashions We Can Ever Remember Seeing in One Collection!

—Just Closed out to White's by a Foremost Fashion-Right Furrier at ½ off the Former Wholesale Prices and now offered to you at Corresponding Reductions

A SALE of furs, such as, according to our records, happens only once in many, many years, even at White's which is, as you know, a pioneer fur house! A sale of furs such as makes running a great department store one of the most interesting things on earth! A sale of furs which brings to you slim supple "dressmaker" fur coats at about half the prices you would expect to pay for just ordinary furs. A sale which puts the imaginative genius of the greatest French designers within your grasp. Replicas of Lanvin, Patou, Vionnet, Redfern, Philippe et Gaston et Heim.

Young fur fashions! Slender fur fashions! With the expensive "made-for-you" look! Every one of these fur coats is made by a great fur house which thinks of fashion and line and slenderness as well as quality, which handles the most exquisitely supple skins as adroitly as if they were fabrics, which designs coats with the intricate detail of cut and line that means distinction and youth and slenderness. Slip into a little slim Lanvin coat, for example, nipped-in waistline, low-placed flare, sleeve with a low-placed puff—a coat in which you look more slender than without a coat! Or feel the luxury of a mink coat which it took a skilled furrier eight weeks to match and make perfectly! Or the lure of a summer ermine coat, with an intricate side flare that drapes as softly as silk!

Note the scalloped hems, the gracious feminine longer-in-the-back line, the flattering linings nearly as interesting as the remarkable furs. Note Vionnet's exciting diagonal line, which we have never before seen so adroitly translated into fur!

There's scarcely a coat in the lot more than sixty days old! Not just new fur coat fashions, but the newest fur coat fashions, some from the most recent Paris collections! Not fur fashions which didn't "make the grade," but the accepted fur fashions such as the smartest women on two continents will wear this Winter. Every coat is an outstanding value, a really thrilling fur coat, a "slim princess" coat which "does things" to you.

LEAGUE FEAR SPLITS SENATE ON MESSAGE

Washington, Dec. 5—Commenting on the President's message, Senator Sheppard (D.), of Texas, said:

"I believe the President's recommendation that the United States enter the world court of the League of Nations is a step toward the League of Nations. Our entrance into the world court would be a step further toward the league, of which it is a part. Whether we enter the League of Nations is a matter for the people to decide. Of course, I am an advocate of the league."

SENATOR McKELLAR (D.), of Tennessee—"I disagree with the President about the world court proposal keeping us out of the League of Nations. I think entrance into the court ultimately paves the way for entry into the league."

SENATOR CARAWAY (D) of Arkansas—"I hope adhesion to the court will mean our entrance into the League. I shall vote for it with that hope in mind."

SENATOR BARKLEY (D) of Kentucky—"I think many people would regard it as a step in the direction of the League."

SENATOR PITTMAN (D) of Nevada—"I see no relationship between the court and the League so far as we are concerned."

SENATOR CAPPER (R) of Kansas—"It won't take us an inch nearer the League. The people of this country are unalterably opposed to the League."

SENATOR GEORGE (D) of Georgia—"I don't think it moves us toward the League."

SENATOR HARRIS (D) of Georgia—"It doesn't necessarily mean any involvement in the league.

SENATOR SWANSON (D) of Virginia (Author of the original World Court resolution in 1926 which was adopted)—"The league and the court are entirely separate. If our relations to the court were entirely satisfactory, naturally it might aid in fostering a spirit of friendliness toward the league but if, on the other hand, our relations with the court were unsatisfactory, it meant danger for this country. This would tend to keep us away from the League of Nations."

SENATOR WALSH (D) of Montana (Leader of the fight for the World Court in 1926)—"I have always dissociated the two. The league and the court stand on an entirely different plane."

SENATOR HAYDEN (D of Arizona—"I think the league and the court two separate and distinct entities. I am for the World Court but I don't see why it should mean entrance into the league."

SENATOR WHEELER (D) of Montana—"I think there is no question in the mind of any intelligent man but that the ultimate goal of those sponsoring the World Court is entrance into the League of Nations."

REP. STEPHEN G. PORTER of Pennsylvania, chairman of the House foreign affairs committee, said that if the United States were in the League of Nations, it would be bound to meddle in affairs abroad which do not concern this country.

ADAMS FAVORS FAR WEST BASE

Washington, Dec. 5—The selection of Camp Kearney, near San Diego, Cal., for the West coast naval airship base to house one of the navy's huge dirigibles being built at Akron, O., was recommended to Congress by Secretary Adams.

His recommendation overrode the choice of Sunnyvale, Cal., made by a majority of the West coast naval air base board and concurred with Rear Admiral J. W. Reaves of the naval general board.

He added, however, that neither of the locations recommended in the majority and minority reports, in his opinion would be satisfactory for an airship base.

Pope Receives King, Queen in Audience

leather case containing three medals of gold, silver and bronze commemorating the visit.

The Pontiff gave the Queen a mosaic reproduction of a picture of the Madonna Della Sebia copied from Raphael's "Madonna" in the Chigi Palace and also a rosary of precious stones set in gold.

King Victor Emmanuel gave the Pope a pectoral cross studded with jewels and also a little crucifix which is believed to have belonged to the Venerable Clotilde of the House of Savoy.

The monarchs and the Pope met in the Vatican throne room. They were alone there; doors were closed and guarded and what they said no one yet knows.

The conversation was made possible by the approval given by the King and the Pontiff to the treaties signed at the Lateran palace February 11, ending the 60-year-old so-called "Roman question."

POMP IS LACKING.

Hundreds of thousands of Romans and Italians from all parts of the country saw the royal progress through Rome in close-d automobiles. There was some disappointment because the visit was not made in carriages of state, as had been planned. The automobiles were accompanied by only an escort of cyclist police, the imposing military display customary in royal processions being absent.

The King was in full uniform as a general and wore the Order of Annunziata. Queen Helena was dressed exactly as an American woman would be for an audience at the Vatican—in black veil over a white gown, with long sleeves and high neck. She wore no jewelry.

The King and Queen entered Vatican City as the Arch of Charlemagne, where the Piazza Santa Marta begins. There they were met by a reception party consisting of Prince Massimo, papal post-master-general, and Commendatore Serafini, governor of Vatican City.

A squadron of papal gendarmes presented arms. The band of the papal gendarmes played the royal march for the first time in their history, except in practice. A detachment of Swiss guards in full uniform, wearing their breastplates and helmets and carrying halberds, stood by. A squadron of gendarmes heralded the arrival of the sovereigns with trumpets and then the band of the Palatine guard sounded the royal march.

From Clementine Hall, where another group of ecclesiastics waited to receive them, the royal and ecclesiastical party went through a series of rooms known as the Rooms of the Tapestries to the papal anti-chamber where they stopped. The door to the papal throne room was closed.

Apprised of the arrival of the King and the Queen, the Pope entered the throne room from his private library. The door to the throne room opened and the King and the Queen stepped in, alone.

The Pope was walking toward the door. The King and the Queen walked forward. They met halfway across the room. The King and the Queen bent and kissed the Pope's hand. The Pope raised them up.

GIFTS FROM POPE.

The door was closed. The Pope and the sovereigns were alone. If the walls had ears they were the only ones that heard what was said.

Outside the closed door, the dignitaries of church and state conversed in whispers or did not speak at all. They could not hear even the sound of a murmur from within.

They could visualize the relative position of the three personages within. Beside the papal throne two chairs had been placed, one on each side. The king sat on the right, the queen on the left.

Their majesties and His Holiness in their conversation, it was later learned wished each other well and congratulated each other over settlement of the difficulties between the church and the Italian state. Both King and the Pontiff said they were certain the settlement would be mutually advantageous.

The door opened. The little group marched in. The King introduced to the Pope the minister of foreign affairs, Grandi, and then the members of his court.

The audience over, the Pope walked part of the way to the door with the King and Queen. The royal pair carried religious gifts presented by the Pontiff.

After leaving the pontifical apartments the monarch went with their party, escorted by a group of ecclesiatics, to the office of Cardinal Gasparri, papal secretary of state, who, with Mussolini, had been given most credit for bringing about the settlement of the Roman question.

THEY VISIT ST. PETER'S.

Cardinal Gasparri, dressed in his purple robes, met them in the first room of his apartments. The greetings between the royal pair and the cardinal were simpler than those between the sovereigns and the Pope.

The cardinal escorted the royal party to his reception room, where took place the various presentations and introductions of the respective staffs. Flanking Cardinal Gasparri were Monsignor Pizzardo, secretary for extraordinary ecclesiastical affairs, and Monsignor Ottaviani, Pizzardo's assistant.

After the meeting with Gasparri the sovereigns left and descended to the Basilica of St. Peter's, passing through the Ducal Hall and the Royal Hall.

Cardinal Merry del Val, high priest of the basilica, met the royal party on the threshold of the great church and offered the sovereigns the holy water. Then the procession went to the altar of the sacrament, to the papal altar and to the grotto.

Before the Baldachino altar in the center of the Cathedral the sovereigns and their party knelt and worshipped at the tomb of the apostles, where St. Peter, a predecessor of the Pope they had just visited, is buried.

Cardinal Gasparri returned the visit of the sovereigns, going to the Quirinal palace shortly after the arrival of the King and Queen from the Vatican.

TAX SLASH BILL IS TAKEN UP IN HOUSE

Washington, Dec. 5 (AP)—Consideration of the administration-sponsored tax reduction bill was begun today in the House with leaders prepared to expedite work in the hope of sending the resolution calling for a 1 per cent cut in the income rates for individuals and corporations to the Senate before adjournment.

A few minutes before the House got to work, its ways and means committee submitted a formal report urging quick approval of the measure. Only one member of the committee, Ramseyer, a Republican from Iowa, dissented.

Ramseyer argued that a reduction in revenue was not warranted, and insisted if some taxes were burdensome and unjust the situation should be met by "readjustment of the tax burden but in a way not to reduce" Treasury revenue.

It was agreed Ramseyer should have opportunity to present his views from the floor.

While the House settled down to discussion, the Senate Finance Committee went into session and began preparations to expedite work on the measure.

Chairman Smoot of the finance group said he would seek to put the resolution before the Senate tomorrow or early next week.

Tax Cut Petition Signed by Million

Washington, Dec. 5—Vice-President Curtis and Speaker Longworth have completed arrangements for the presentation to Congress Saturday of petitions bearing signatures representing over a million persons who favor a downward revision of the taxes and surtaxes on earned incomes.

At a conference in the Vice-President's office they designated Reed Smoot, chairman of the Senate finance committee, and Rep. Willis Hawley, chairman of the House ways and means committee, to head delegations of lawmakers to formally receive the great mass of petitions at the east front of the Capitol.

It is expected that members of both committees and other senators and representatives will take part in the ceremonies on the plaza.

The petitions, originated, circulated, assembled and tabulated by the coast-to-coast chain of Hearst newspapers, will be presented at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon, following a colorful and unique parade, in which several thousand Washingtonians, New Yorkers, Philadelphians and Baltimoreans march from west of the White House to the Capitol Plaza.

Isaac Cans, Washington philanthropist and publicist, who was selected as grand marshal of the parade at a luncheon at the City Club, attended by about 100 leading business, professional and veteran organization leaders, declared the prospects are that this will be one of the most memorable and significant pageant that ever passed along historic Pennsylvania ave.

Whole support of President Hoover and his policies were voiced by members of the New England Builders' Supply Association through a telegram sent the Chief Executive.

The association also decided on a co-operative newspaper advertising program in connection with the Hoover program of the stabilization of business. This is the 20th annual convention of the organization, concluding tonight at th Copley-Plaza.

"Our business is large—we do $100,000,000 worth a year," said Lawrence F. Power, executive secretary. "Our dealers in the future are going to sell certified building materials. We have retained a firm of expert engineers to pass on the quality of the materials offered.

"The trouble has been in the past that the average citizen has known little or nothing of materials, but hereafter they will be able to buy with knowledge that they will get what they pay for."

The commission's report indicates that further plans will be made in the coming months. No drafts of legislation are filed at this time.

MARKET RUSH ON TURKEYS CONTINUES

With fish still scarce, meat remaining at high prices and turkey at slightly lower than pre-Thanksgiving prices, the Faneuil Hall market is exceptionally quiet this week.

Most dealers are asking 45 and 50 cents for turkeys as people are continuing to buy cautiously. Many thrifty housewives, it is said, are waiting a good price level in the belief that prices will drop in time for the holiday due to the large receipts. This factor is keeping turkeys at a good price level from the dealer viewpoint.

Some turkeys, however, are secured for 35 cents a pound. Chickens are weaker and are being sold at native roasting chickens at 40 to 45 cents. Fowl are lower.

Eggs are about the same with a top price of 90 cents for the best, although other grades are as low as 80 cents.

Meat prices are about on a par with last week. Rumps are 40 to 45 with top round at 50 cents. Veal steak sells for 50 cents, shoulder at 35 cents and chops for 40 cents.

Honey is a good bargain this year, the prices being 10 and 15 cents lower than last year. The dry weather which affected many crops adversely proved to be perfect for bees, the vegetation producing better than usual. As a result two to three times as much honey is on the market all of it of a good grade yet very reasonable.

Christmas trees from Rue, portable, are being sold in large quantities, especially to decorators. The bunches range about $1.50 for three and four tree trees.

Fish dealers report difficulty in filling all their orders. An example of the way prices have advanced is that of mackerel, once priced at 25 cents, and now at 50 cents. Cod and haddock, recently 10 to 12 cents, is now 18 cents. Halibut 60 to 75 cents.

3 CITIES SEEK TO TRY YOUNG KILLER

New York, Dec. 5 (AP)—John Murray, youthful gunman and alleged killer, who was captured after a pistol battle with detectives, appeared in police lineup today charged with being a fugitive from justice from three cities.

Authorities from Philadelphia and Newark and Bradley Beach, N. J., all claimed the right to try Murray on charges pending against him. They went into conference with Dist. Atty. Banton in an effort to determine which has jurisdiction.

Three women from Newark picked Murray as the man who had lived in the neighborhood in which George B. Lee, Newark Public Service Company employe, was killed and robbed of a $40,000 payroll in October, 1926.

Murray is accused of Lee's murder and he has been indicted in Bradley Beach as one of the five men who participated in the holdup and slaying of George Danielson, 65, bank messenger last summer.

Philadelphia police blame robberies totaling nearly $50,000 on Murray, who is alleged to have operated there under the name of "Frank McElwood."

Murray told Chief Inspector Howard Mulrooney he was an iron worker but said he had been out of work at his trade for several years.

Mabel Davis, the young and blond woman in whose apartment Murray was captured, also was taken into the lineup. She was arrested when she attempted to leave the apartment by the fire escape. She said she formerly lived in Philadelphia with Murray.

U. S. Commissioner Quits Under Fire

New York, Dec. 5 (AP)—On the eve of an investigation by United States Attorney Amen of Brooklyn into bail practices of magistrates, Federal commissioners and bonding agents, William J. Wilson has resigned as United States commissioner in the eastern district of New York.

His resignation becomes effective December 31. It was announced today that he had decided to resign, after five years in office, to accept a partnership in a law firm.

FULL PROBE OF PROHIBITION LOBBY ASKED

Washington, Dec. 5 (AP)—Investigation of all associations or societies which appear before congressional committees, either for or opposed to prohibition, is suggested by the board of temperance, prohibition and public morals of the Methodist Episcopal Church, if that [illegible] is not already being done.

This action, expressed in a resolution, adopted at the annual meeting, a free board of managers and made public today, is suggested to Senator Caraway, Democrat, Arkansas, chairman of the Senate subcommittee investigating lobbies, that this be done in order that the United States Congress may not seem to give countenance or sympathy to any unworthy motive.

Adoption of the resolution was a result of a statement by Representative Tinkham, Republican, Massachusetts, suggesting that the committee "unmask the indefensible political activities" of the Methodist board and of the Federal Council of Churches.

Another resolution protested against the exploitation on billboards of women smoking or in display advertising in magazines.

Huntington Avenue Gown Shop Looted

Air Romance, Better Than "Chickie"

What Has Happened

MARY PATRICIA DAWN, beautiful, young brunette, meets the lad of her dreams in the person of Guy Elliott, aviator. Guy is developing a perfect airplane in the plant of old William Bryce. Happy days follow with Pat and Guy in love. Then comes Barbara Bryce, young widow of Bryce's son, with her seductive lure. Later Guy receives a visit from Barbara and her young son, upon whom old Bryce squanders a fortune. Tom Burns, a workman, rages about the unfairness of wealth. His invalid son is dying for want of necessities. When Bryce refuses a loan, Burns swears revenge. He robs the office safe and is captured after a gun fight. Preparations are being made for Pat to enter college. Hearing much gossip about the youth of today, Mrs. Dawn prays that Pat will remain the sweet girl she is. Pat's father dies and Mrs. Dawn gives her life savings to Bryce to invest, but Guy gets them back. Bryce stops financing the plane factory, suddenly three persons vanish, Guy, Pat and Mrs. Bryce's little boy. A note is received demanding $20,000 ransom for the boy.

Now Read On

CHAPTER 28.

"BY the time you receive this message the fate of your grandson will be settled. He will either be alive and well and soon again in your possession. Or he will be meeting death. It depends on whether or not you have followed directions.

"If you have placed the ransom according to the specified plan, then Billy Bryce will be found in a certain hotel, the name of which will presently be furnished you.

"Do not get excited by this delay. Do NOT whip the police into action. Any move in this direction will be fatal despite the payment of the ransom. WAIT!"

Wait! Hang longer on this cross of anguish, the wind and the dark and the terror sweeping upon them from the Outposts of Hope. Hang through the black night with the vision of a child tortured passing and passing until the very mind is seared, and in the glaring day while the sound of a child crying beats down the heart.

Barbara Bryce sat with her eyes closed and her hands pressed against them. She tried to shut out the wild and utter desolation into which she now sank. She murmured blankly: "I can endure it more. . . ."

Her father-in-law came to her across great unseen spaces. His words echoed forlornly.

"Perhaps they took him away in the plane. They're holding him at a distance until sure of the ransom. It will take time to bring him back. See—this message was sent before the ransom. It will take time to bring him back. See—this message was sent before the ransom could possibly have been acquired. Bear up. You will have Billy soon!"

Ah -but suppose something goes wrong with their plans. Suppose they take the ransom and successfully make the getaway, but it becomes too difficult to return the child? Suppose that—Bryce flung a hand against his eyes. And suddenly sobbing caught the girl in his arms: "There is a God, Barbara. I have felt Him these days —when that woman I would have cheated came—gave me the money. I felt His Spirit. He will not let our child be harmed.

"By now the money has perhaps been taken. Barbara, by now Billy is on the way back to us."

Crouched in the brush with the impenetrable dark pressing on them, men waited. They kept alert eyes in the direction of the flume. They couldn't see it, but they knew where it was.

Not a sound came from them. Little scurrying movements in the undergrowth, the snapping of a dry twig or the rustle of dead leaves broke sharply now and then through the black quiet. The watching men tightened their attention. They were poised and ready.

No one could reach that flume; no one could remove the square packet of bills without five men pouncing upon him. Other men were posted further up the hill. Any footfall—any human sound, however stealthy and guarded—instantly they would spring with flashlights and pistols upon the intruder.

No one could come up or down this foot path. And no machine would pass the highway for miles and miles on either side of the flume without first answering to the police.

Since 11 o'clock they had waited. One hour after the second ransom note arrived, the police of two counties lay in wait for the kidnaper of little Billy Bryce.

They threatened to kill the child if any watch was kept. Yes—kidnapers always give this warning. But if they mean to kill they will do this whether a ransom is paid or not. Hickman promised an agonized father to return his child alive if the money should be paid. And the shocked world knows how Hickman's promise was kept. The Chicago kidnapers promised little

GOODFELLOW AID MEANS SANTA

More Generous Contributions Needed as Letters Pour in and Yuletide Nears

More letters' Heaps of them, and all appealing.

The GOODFELLOW EDITOR will have his work cut out for him this year if he is to make all worried hearts happy.

And in order to do this, he must have YOUR help and YOURS and YOURS.

The appeals of mothers for their children are the most touching that come to the GOODFELLOW EDITOR. Appeals for bare necessities of clothing to keep the little ones warm.

From a Somerville mother:

Could you please help me this Christmas and give my little one some warm underwear and shoes, as my husband has been out of work since last September. We are in debt for rent and groceries and it is so hard to get anything to eat. But the cold is worse, as my children have no shoes or warm clothes to wear. May God bless you in my hour of need and please help us. I have eight children and they are all so thin and puny my heart is broken looking at them. I am sure God will reward you all if your kindness is spreading, as it is, and I will teach my children to always thank their benefactors.

From a South End mother:

I am writing, asking if you can help to keep my little children warm going to school, as their little bodies feel the cold now, as their father is out of work and when he gets work it is only a couple of days. I have three children and am expecting another little one soon. Sir, if you will please help me to keep their little bodies, feet and hands warm, I will be more than thankful. Helen is 8 years old, Harry is 7 and Robert is 6. I just came out of the hospital four weeks ago with a breakdown myself. Hope some kind reader of the American will help me out and make my little ones happy for Christmas.

From a Chelsea boy:

I am a boy 16 years old and I am the only one working in the family, as my father has been dead over nine years. I have one brother and sister and make only $10 a week, so you see it's hard for us to get anything. We would like some underwear, both for 14-year-old size and my sister, 11-year-old size, also stockings 9½ and 8½. The 8½ is for my sister.

These are only specimens, picked at random from the pile. In another pile are the responses from GOODFELLOWS. As yet, this is a far smaller pile.

It's easy to be a GOODFELLOW, and for what it costs in money you draw an incalculable dividend in pleasure and satisfaction.

For what you would drop in an evening at bridge or poker, you can make an entire family delirious with happiness.

To be a GOODFELLOW, merely request of the GOODFELLOW EDITOR the name and address of a worthy family. You are at liberty to do for that family as much as you will.

If you cannot afford the time, but can afford the money, send it to the GOODFELLOW EDITOR.

FREE REALTY MAN, WIFE IN RAID

Wallaces Are Dismissed by U. S. Commissioner; Big Still Found on Property

Charges of manufacturing liquor preferred against Fred A. Wallace Framingham real estate dealer, and his wife, Mae C. Wallace, music teacher, after federal agents seized a 1500-gallon still in a barn on their estate in Hollston, were dismissed today by United States Commissioner Edwin C. Jenney after a hearing lasting nearly three days.

Commissioner Jenney found the Wallaces had sold their property in Holkston in good faith to a man known to them as "Mr. Horner" and that they had given him keys to the premises.

Asst. U. S. Atty. Elihu D. Stone argued that Wallace knew liquor was being manufactured in the barn and referred to him as "the master mind."

Wallace had previously testified that when he sold the property to "Mr. Horner" it was agreed he would continue to occupy the place until April 1, 1930. It was after the property had been sold that the seizure took place.

BARNARD LEFT $845,000

Simon Barnard of Brookline left $845,000, according to his will probated at Dedham. His son, Louis I., and his daughter, Mrs. Esther R. Cawson, were made executors and both filed bonds of $800,000.

After public bequests to Hebrew institutions, residue of the estate is to be held in trust and the income paid to the testator's children.

A son, Emanuel Barnard, who was not to share in his father's will, was remembered in a codicil attached to the document which divides his share between his wife and himself.

No reason was given in the instrument why he was at first cut off. A daughter, Mrs. Paulina Pichell, is requested by her father to take from her share 10 per cent and place it in a bank for the benefit of her son, Pincus, until he becomes of age.

Upon the death of the last surviving child the trust fund will cease and the principal will be divided among the heirs.

Tess Returns in Time to Refute Scandal

Dire rumors were being spread about Theresa of the Touraine while police hunted her on charges of non-support and abandonment of her family of four kittens.

As it turned out, however, Theresa had simply checked her family with the police while she kept a pressing engagement for a luncheon at the Touraine, and in good season she returned to collect them again.

All through her kittenhood and married life Theresa has kept close to the hotel, working hard at her job of keeping mice at bay, so her disappearance was received with some apprehension.

Police at Lagrange st. station, however, were delighted when she strolled in, followed by four beautiful kittens in single file. She posed for her picture with the family and then, while policemen were admiring her progeny, she disappeared again.

For two hours it looked as if the police had four foundling kittens on their hands, and they were taking steps for the upkeep and education of the family when Theresa returned, joking her workers and purring like a miniature steam engine.

A check-up indicated that she had gone to lunch at the Touraine with a matronly cat from Mt. Vernon st. and an unidentified gentleman cat, apparently of foreign birth, with whom a romance is suspected. She took the kittens home with her about the middle of the afternoon.

Says Dentist Best in Aiding Neurotics

The belief that dentists could do more to aid in the treatment of hysterics and neurotic children than doctors was advanced by Dr. A. Warren Stearns, dean of the Tufts medical school and state commissioner of correction at a dinner of the American Academy of Dental Science at the Parker House.

"The reason," Dr. Stearns said "is that a great many children who may be potential neurotics do not often see a doctor, but all of them must have dental care. This gives the dentist a great opportunity to bring about beneficial changes in their habits through the application of practical psychology at the proper time."

MAYOR CASASSA PUTS OLD REVERE BILLS UP TO LEGISLATURE

WILL PAY IF CLAIMS ARE LEGAL

Urges They Be Validated and the City Ordered to Pay Them

Payment of old bills by the city government of Revere will depend on whether or not the Legislature finds them legal, Mayor Andrew A. Casassa stated today.

The mayor said the bills, aggregating $121,315.63, were contracted under the administration of Mayor Thomas Keene, and that the investigation made by Theodore N. Waddell, State director of accounts, resulted from a request by the present incumbent.

Director Waddell filed with the Legislature a recommendation that various claims against the city be validated and that the city be directed to work out its own method of paying such bills.

"For the last six years," said Mayor Casassa, Revere has been paying its bills promptly and its credit is better than ever.

"The investigation of Director Waddell ordered by the Legislature, was made at my request in justice to the men who apparently in good faith contracted bills with the Keene administration. I was told to borrow money and pay the bills over a period of years. It would not be fair to the taxpayers to pay them all in any one year.

"The present administration is trying to straighten out the mess and if the Legislature finds they are legal, we will make every effort to pay them. Otherwise we can do nothing."

KIDNAP CLUE TO MISSING GIRLS

In the belief that two missing girls had been kidnaped, Lynn police were today seeking a well-known Lynn man.

The girls are Lillian Warren, 17, of Warren st., Lynn, who disappeared Nov. 24, and Mary Zippo, 18, of Summer st., Salem, missing three weeks.

Search for the Lynn man was prompted by a story told by Edward Warren, brother of Lillian, in which he repeated a conversation he says he overheard in a barber shop.

Miss Warren was last seen in the vicinity of the barber shop.

Last Tuesday night she telephoned the home of Sadie Goldstein in Chelsea and on being told Miss Goldstein was out said she would call later.

Sergt. John Healey of the vice squad, in charge of the case, is also investigating the disappearance of the Zippo girl, whose father reported that last night two men visited his home and said that if he would offer a reward they were confident they could find his daughter.

Zippo took the number of their car, which was found to be registered to a Lynn man.

For COLDS

We all catch colds and they can make us miserable; but yours needn't last long if you will do this: Take two or three tablets of Bayer Aspirin just as soon as possible after a cold starts. Stay in the house if you can—keep warm. Repeat with another tablet or two of Bayer Aspirin every three or four hours, if those symptoms of cold persist. Take a good laxative when you retire, and keep bowels open. If throat is sore, dissolve three tablets in a quarter-glassful of water and gargle. This soothes inflammation and reduces infection. There is nothing like Bayer Aspirin for a cold, or sore throat. And it relieves aches and pain almost instantly. The genuine tablets, marked Bayer, are absolutely harmless to the heart.

Diegel Meets Sarazen in Quarter-Finals Today

HAGEN PLAYS MANERO IN 'PRO' GOLF

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 5—Leo Diegel, defending champion, and Walter Hagen, five times holder of the title—contenders for the 1929 Professional Golfers Association championship stroked their way through a gruelling second round of 36-hole match play to the quarterfinal round.

Diegel swept through his match in easy fashion with Herman Barron, Port Chester, N. Y., 10—8 Hagen's win was not decisive, but he eliminated Charles Guest, Los Angeles, 5 and 4.

The Aqua Caliente, professional won the first hole from Barron and was never pressed from that time on. At the ninth he was three up and had increased the lead to eight at the 18th. The match ended on the 27th, with Diegel posting figures of 37—33—70 for the morning round, with a 34 on the third nine Barron shot 40—38—78 and took the 36 on the third nine.

Hagen had a 5—34—69, two under par, for the first 18 and went out in the afternoon in 37; he was three up at the 27th. Guest had a 37—37—74 and 35 for his third nine.

FARRELL SURVIVES

Two former national open champs, Gene Sarazen and Johnny Farrell, advanced to the third round. Sarazen defeated Fred Morrison of Los Angeles, tournament medalist, 3 and 2, while Farrell eliminated Henry Cuici, Bridgeport, Conn., 2 and 1.

In the most bitter struggle of the day, Al Espinosa, Chicago, wood out another veteran campaigner, William Mehlhorn, New York, on the 40th hole. They were even at the 9th; Mehlhorn pieced up a one up advantage at the 18th, but they were all square at the 36. Espinosa had two rounds of 35—37—72 and 33—35—70; Mehlhorn carded 35—36—71 and 36—35—71. They halved the next three extra holes in 4, 3, 4, and Espinosa won the match on the next green with a par 5.

DIEGEL VS. SARAZEN

At Watrous, Detroit, removed Harry Naboltz, Houston Texas pro, in an overwhelming 9—7 defeat, while Tony Manero, New York, defeated Eddie Schultz, Troy, N. Y., 6 and 5.

Craig Wood, young Bloomfield N. J., star, entered the third round with a 3—2 win from Neil Christian, Portland, Ore.

Today's matches will pit Diegel against Sarazen in the outstanding test. Hagen will meet Manero in the other lower bracket play. Wood and Hagen are the favorites, and, if they come through as expected, will face each other in a semifinal classic tomorrow.

Pairings for the second round day follow:

Leo Diegel vs. Gene Sarazen.
Tony Manero vs. Walter Hagen.
Craig Wood vs. Johnny Farrell.
Al Watrous vs. Al Espinosa.

HARVARD CREW IN 4 REGATTAS

Harvard's varsity crew will have [illegible] race next spring, the first being April 26 with Massachusetts Institute of Technology on the Charles river, and the annual Yale regatta taking place June 20 at New London.

A quadrangular regatta will take place on the Charles, May 17, when Harvard, Navy, Pennsylvania and M. I. T. race. A triangular regatta, in which the Crimson oarsmen will compete against Cornell and Syracuse will take place at Ithaca, May 24.

The junior varsity schedule is exactly that of the varsity, the same opponents being met at the same times.

The third varsity crew will compete in the American Rowing Association regatta at Philadelphia, May 31, and the Harvard combination crew, made up of varsity and freshman substitutes, will meet a similarly constituted Yale aggregation June 19 at New London.

Zitzmann of Reds Sold to Newark

Cincinnati, O., Dec. 5—Bill Zitzmann, utility outfielder of the Cincinnati Reds, has been sold outright to the Newark International League Club, Sidney Weil, Reds' president, announced.

The selling price was not announced, but Weil said part of the cash was used to purchase Wes Kingdon, Newark shortstop, who will go to the Columbus, American Association Club, a Cincinnati farm.

FLATLEY SAYS

GENE TUNNEY smiles at the cameras, showing that travel is broadening—Gene will come back to normal when the boys get busy on that suit—the ex-champ brought home several English suits, but the native one will grab all the publicity.

Albie Booth, according to headline, is going in for the court game but its a different kind of court—Tony Plansky would make a good bundle boy: he tied up three or four games this fall—the ideal All-America team should be written in a speakeasy: where many of them are—with three groups of wrestling impresarios doing business, someone is due for a real fall—Barry Wood has honor marks in all his classes: he sure can pass, those exams.

THIS is the season of the after-dinner speakers: how they go after those dinners.

"Bronocho Nagurski," he chirped.

"How do you spell that first name?" queried "Fat." "Is it Ukranian?"

"No," admitted the hero, "it's just plain broncho. My father looked at me when I was born and said I looked so much like a horse that no other name would fit."

This young man chipped his spine and took two weeks off. He played all through last season with a broken hand. He has been tucked into every portion of the Minnesota team, and played a little bit better than anybody else could. He's the bottled-in-bond All-America type.

President Hoover should get some famous football coach to write one of his "fight" speeches. Then the boys would deliver.

ART SHIRES, White Sox first baseman, has all the ear marks of a ring star, except the cauliflowers. And he will have those shortly, as he evidently is serious in his intention to chase fistic glory and gold, especially gold.

Art has engaged in two recognized musses and his record is perfect. He knocked out Lena Blackburn with a right cross to the eye in his first mill, and finished the sinful Lena with a deftly placed pop bottle to the forehead in his second.

In the preliminaries and obstacles, Art kayoed sundry flunkies, head waiters and house dicks. He never has been knocked down except by a machine gun or bomb and any American League pitcher will tell you how he can hit.

SIX-DAY bike race will clean up $100,000 in New York. Showing that the nut business is the best of them all.

JACK SHARKEY will watch Scott and Von Porat Monday picking his spot for the Florida brawl—Jack could take the pair any one evening—Dixie Boston College captain, will have some extra kicking to do to and at the officials—Johnny Evers may be head of the Eastern League next year; this would make it a snappy circuit.

50,000 experts can be wrong—ask any kid left off the pet season teams—85,000 fans can be crazy; that many went to watch Army-Notre Dame in Chicago—which reminds us that Rockne football usually leaves the spectators cold—but think how tough it would be if we had prohibition.

New Amateur Six to Be Formed Here

There will be another major amateur hockey team in Boston this winter that will be in the same class as the University Club and B. A. A.

Fred Routhier, for the past three years president of the Bay State Amateur Hockey League, of which he was the founder, and William J. Flynn, vice-president of the league, who also managed the Catah Cubs' team which captured league honors during the past two years, are in charge of this brand new [illegible].

Teams Picked for Big Legion Grid Game

THE "Army" and "Navy" football teams, composed of seniors from New England colleges, who will take part in the Christmas basket fund game Saturday afternoon at Fenway Park, under the auspices of the Crosscup-Pishon Post, A. L., will hold their first practice tomorrow afternoon. Arthur Sampson, coach of Tufts, and Joseph McKenney, Boston College mentor, will be in charge of the opposing elevens.

McKenney has been allotted Cole and Booma of Dartmouth; Louder and Fitz of Bates; Weiss, Sweeney, Finn Dougherty, Manfredia and Cullum of Holy Cross; Murphy, Creedon, Lyons and Green of Boston College; Munroe of Brown; Hasiltine of Middlebury; Tansey of Norwich; Cox, Bradley and Lilert of Mass. Aggies and Bianchi of New Hampshire.

Sampson chose as the nucleus of his team: Kucharski, Alterini, Clancy and Gannon of Holy Cross. Herman and Convery of Boston College, Dincolo, Carnie, Tutten and Barrett of Boston University; Mann of Mass. Aggies; Munson and Babcock of Brown; Longnecker, Jeremiah and McDonough of Dartmouth; Shea of New Hampshire; Guarnaccia and McLeod of Middlebury; Waining of Norwich; Zandi of Providence and Fuller of Bates.

McKenney is being assisted in the development of his team by John McMannon and Bill Ormsby, who assisted him this season and last at University Heights. Bunny Corcoran, end coach at Holy Cross, and George "Bulger" Lowe, Dartmouth line mentor, are aiding Sampson with his eleven.

A brief survey of Fenway Park this morning revealed the snow had been entirely removed from the playing surface and the seating accommodations. The members of the Crosscup-Pishon Post declare that by game time Saturday everything will be in apple pie order.

Despite the recent flurry of snow, the ticket sale has been brisk and if the day is warm, the members anticipate one of the best crowds of the season. Tickets are on sale at all the leading sporting goods stores in Boston.

BERTAZZOLO IN HARD TRAINING

Ricardo Bertazzolo is rounding into the best condition of his career for his 10-round slugging bee with Big Boy Rawson of Dorchester at the Arena a week from Monday night.

The huge Italian is confident that he will start a surge against Rawson that will lead him to a match with Jack Sharkey.

He injured his right hand in his second bout with Maloney, but on his tremendous strength and gameness, he fought off the South Boston heavyweight for the full 10 rounds. Maloney could not knock him out or knock him down, and he lauds at the idea that Rawson, winner of 22 out of 23 bouts by knockouts, will be able to flatten him.

Testimonial for B. C. Grid Star

Charley Murphy, Boston College's brilliant right end for the past three grid seasons, will be given a testimonial tonight at the Cocoanut Grove by a group of his admirers.

Eighteen of the Boston College football squad will be on hand to aid in the ceremonies. John Curley is in charge of the affair and has invited the Eagles and their lady friends.

Murphy played his final game for B. C. in the 12-0 victory over Holy Cross last Saturday. As usual he was one of the outstanding players in the game.

Divodi and Yeo Signed by McArdle

New York, Dec. 5 (INS)—Andy Divodi and Canada Leo, welterweight contenders, have been signed by Matchmaker Tom McArdle for a bout at Madison Square Garden December 13, it was announced today. The scrap will be the opening 10-rounder on the card featuring Ruby Goldstein and Jimmy McLarnin.

RUGGED Hockey is expected tonight when the Tigers, champions of the Canadian-American League tackle the hard-checking New Haven Eagles at the Boston Garden.

The Tigers will be fighting to retain their lead in the race for the Can-Am title, for the Eagles are only two points behind the Powers coached sextet. The Tigers have won five games in seven starts against four by the Eagles in the same number of contests.

Manager Eddie Powers has the best assortment of hockey players he has ever directed in Canadian-American League competition. The Tigers are noticably stronger than last season when they went through to the title.

In Yank Boyd, Manager Powers has the best big league prospect in the ranks. Fresh from the amateur ranks, Boyd is already the sensational of the Can-Am League. He broke in at the very start of this season and in seven games he has caged 11 goals and been credited with four assists.

Due to the attention he has attracted by his wonderful all around play, Boyd is a marked man. Opponents are trying to cover him, realizing that if the former amateur star is stopped, the Tiger offense will be checked.

Regardless of the special attention, he is receiving Boyd has continued to star. He is a fighter and takes his bumps like a major without complaint or a flinch.

With five goals and eight assists, Capt. "Deacon" Waite is the runner up for individual honors. Capt. Waite is one of the best combination players in the professional ranks.

Scott-Von Porat Fight Victor May Get Miami Bout

DEMPSEY PREDICTS GO WILL BE ONE OF MOST THRILLING EVER

By JACK DEMPSEY

OTTO VON PORAT and Phil Scott are scheduled to toss fists at each other in Madison Square Garden, New York, next Monday.

And that is one fight that will be worth a jaunt of many miles to look at.

Von Porat is a slugger. Many rate him as the hardest hitter in the game today. He has the old-fashioned fighting heart. He willingly steps in and risks getting flattened just for the chance to be close up and throw some knockout wallops of his own.

Otto likes 'em tough. He wants them to stand toe-to-toe with him and make the outcome depend upon the fury of the blows. If they don't, then Otto goes out after them quite gallantly and eager only to find an opening through which he can drive his huge and dynamite-laden fists.

Scott is supposed to be the exact opposite. He is regarded by many as a boxer, whose greatest forte is blocking, jabbing and then side-stepping. That's where they have Phil tagged all wrong.

SCOTT CAN SLUG, TOO

He uses his science, of course, but he doesn't place his entire reliance upon it. Rather, Phil quite often forgets that he is expected to be only a boxer and he will slug it out with the hardest hitters in the racket.

Remember his bout with Campolo, the giant South American. He had the reputation for being a ring "killer." It was regarded as "suicide" for any man to go plowing into him and mixing it. But Scott did—and won the fight because he not only outgeneraled, but outslugged the Argentine "killer."

Scott, having taken the heaviest hammering that Campolo could let loose, and having survived, goes into the Von Porat battle figuring that if Campolo couldn't drop him, neither can Otto. And that's where the excitement will begin.

JACK LOOKS FOR K. O.

I'll be somewhat surprised if the battle goes the distance. I think that the affair will be a slugging match from the start, with both men trying to send over the sleep smack.

For both Otto and Phil realize that the winner, if he accomplishes the job in spectacular fashion, is certain to get the Miami shot against Sharkey, whereas, if the duel is tame both the winner and the loser may be discarded when the final hunt is made for Sharkey's rival.

Furthermore, if one of those boys shows something really great in the matter of punching and scores with a knockout, he knows that not only will he be almost certain to fight Sharkey, but that he will add to his own prestige, the bout in Florida will draw bigger, and thus his share of the gate will be far greater.

TIGERS CLASH WITH EAGLES

and why he is still in the minors is a mystery.

Capt. Waite will start at center with Johnny Louckes and Yank Boyd on the wings. This line will be relieved by Eddie Burke, Clark Heyd and Mills. The second string forwards are coming along fast and holding up their end in fine shape.

Due to the injury to Ponzi Conant, the Tigers will be short handed on the defense. Eddie Oatman and Reg Mackey will be on the points at the opening face off with Herb Rheaume in the nets and Bill Regan will do the relief work for both Oatman and Mackey.

Although the Eagles are practically the same outfit that represented the City of Elms last season, there are a few new faces. Babe Dye, who was the greatest wing man that ever played for Toronto, is with New Haven, as is Norman Shay, former manager of the Philadelphia Arrows and Chalker Whyte, who has been bouncing around from Springfield to Philadelphia for the past two years.

Manager Jimmy O'Donovan will open with a forward line composed of Whyte, Hughes and Bochard, with Himes and Speyer on the center defense and Jumping Jackie Forbes in the nets.

Pietkiewicz to Be Questioned

New York, Dec. 5 (INS)—Stanislaus Pietkiewicz of Poland, conqueror of Paavo Nurmi and pointdinner in the last British track nd field championships, may rike an official snag if he comes o this country to compete in a eries of races, the A. A. U. declared today.

Pietkiewicz, it is understood by mateur officials, sailed from France yesterday, but, aside from newspaper advices, the A. A. U. lieclared that it had no knowledge f his movements.

It was said by Daniel J. Ferris ational secretary, that if the for ner's credentials were in order nd he proved to be here at his wn expense, he would be allowed o compete without question. If he was coming by invitation, Ferris added, his right to compete will be questioned, because the invitation wasn't issued through official channels.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

To score well, you must take pains with each shot as a golfing principle and, additionally, you must discern the value of one shot as against another. Since an approach to the pin may be two shots combined in one, if you get it up there to save one putt, it is obvious that such a shot has great importance in scoring. Therefore, in executing such shots first watch up and look over your line. It takes but a moment and no one will begrudge you your carefulness. After you see things quite differently when you walk up and look back. A pitch in the green not at first observable shows up, making your line entirely different, since you will have to borrow from the line I allow for it. Also you want to know—before you shoot—exactly which side of the cup you want the ball to come in front or if it is to go straight up you want to know that too. The difference between getting them up, or in, and leaving yourself with two putts, maybe three, is there. Grasp it.

That means just what it says. Fussy, fretty starting—spitting, spluttering getaway—are gone. This remarkable new fuel reproduces summer conditions double-quick—even at zero!

Two special refining processes are what do it. The first prevents the most volatile elements from escaping. The second insures the elimination of the heavy "kerosene borderland" parts. Both are more effective because the crude is specially selected to begin with.

BIBBER M'COY TO TACKLE DE VITO

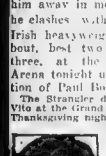
By JACK CONWAY

STRANGLER LEWIS, former world's heavyweight wrestling champion, will try to prove it isn't quite time to put him away in moth balls when he clashes with Pat McG... Irish heavyweight, in a finish bout, best two falls out of three, at the New Boston Arena tonight under the direction of Paul Boesser.

The Strangler defeated Joe De Vito at the Grand Opera House on Thanksgiving night. He displayed his old winning spirit and is confident he will conquer McGill this evening.

Lewis is still a red hot favorite with the fans. As a result, he will go to the post a slight favorite.

Gus Sonnenberg has been the only wrestler who has been able to defeat Lewis this year. The champion's butting tactics and flying tackle have been a little bit too much for Lewis.



Jack Conway

Against wrestlers other than Sonnenberg, the Strangler has displayed his famous victory habits.

McGILL is rated with the first ten in the heavyweight division. Pat is a seasoned performer and is capable of giving a good account of himself against the best of the big fellows.

McGill recently gave Sonnenberg a stiff battle in a title skirmish at the Arena. Pat's admirers are confident he will come through with a win tonight and secure another shot at Sonnenberg.

BIBBER McCoy, former Holy Cross baseball star, will tackle Joe DeVito of Providence in the semifinal.

McCoy has been brought along slowly and now appears ready for the big test. In the event the former college hero can get past the rugged DeVito he will be in a position to hurl challenges at Lewi Malcewicz and Sonnenberg.

ED GEORGE, sensational young heavyweight from the University of Michigan, will battle Sam Skorsky of Chelsea. Henri Duclane of France will meet John Grandovich of New York, and Harry Mammus, Springfield wildman, will tackle Carl Lemle of South Boston in the opening matches.

PICKS 'EM UP, LAYS 'EM DOWN

JACKIE FIELDS IN BOUT HERE ON DEC. 13

After dickering with Jackie Fields, world's welterweight champion for the past two years, the Boston Garden has finally persuaded the titleholder to come to the Hub. The smiling Los Angeles boy will make his professional debut at the Garden on December 13 against Gorilla Jones of Akron.

Long before Fields won the welter crown from Joe Dundee of Baltimore, Hub promoters vainly tried to bring him here. Of course Al Mello of Lowell always was mentioned for one end of the card and no doubt this has been the chief reason for Fields' refusal to come to Boston. During his entire career in the ring, Fields has never met a southpaw and he flatly refused to take on Mello.

In spite of the fact that Gorilla Jones is one of the most vicious punchers in the game today, Fields agreed to meet him here but it is understood that the match almost fell through for a couple of days when Garden officials balked at the financial demands of the champion.

Huskies to Elect Soccer Captain

Northeastern's soccer captain for next season will be elected at the annual soccer banquet, tomorrow evening, at the University Club. A manager also will be chosen, while letters and numerals will be awarded by Winthrop E. Nightingale, chairman of the faculty committee on athletics.

Speakers include Coach Dave Peardy, Capt. Fred Hess, Manager Russell Cobb, '30, Wellaston Athletic Director Edward S. Parsons, H. Bradlee Fenno, advisory head of athletics, and Prof. Robert Bruce.

M'Millen-Hagen Top All-Star Mat Show

GEORGE HAGEN, the Brooklyn "bone-crusher," who meets Jim McMillen, the former University of Illinois all-American football star, in the feature match of Billy Avery's all-star mat show at the Mechanics Building next Wednesday night, is one of the most feared grapplers in the wrestling game.

The battle between these two outstanding heavyweights tops an attractive program of five bouts.

Hagen, a giant Dane and the man who broke George Calza's right leg with his famous toe hold a year ago last September in a match in Chicago, is being sidetracked by many of the well known stars.

The deadly manner in which he applies the torturing toe hold is making it difficult for the Brooklyn sensation to secure bouts. It was only after considerable trouble that Promoter Avery secured McMillen's consent to the match.

"McMillen didn't want the match," said Avery, "but when I told him there was the possibility of arranging a bout for him with Dick Shikat, the recognized world's heavyweight champion, in the event he defeated Hagen, Jim thought the matter over more seriously and finally agreed."

It will be the toughest assignment McMillen has undertaken since he started his professional career four years ago. The former teammate of the immortal Harold "Red" Grange realizes this fact and has already started conditioning for the match.

He is scheduled to arrive in Boston early Monday morning. Hagen is a spectacular wrestler and as McMillen is of the same type one of the most thrilling mat contests staged around these parts in years is anticipated.

Another hair-raiser is looked for in the semi-final tilt between Jim Londos, the recognized Greek champion, and Joe (Bull) Komur, the battling Lithuanian.

In the third tussle, George Calza, the Italian champion, will take on "Buck" Olson, the Swedish giant from Minneapolis. The other two star bouts will be announced.

Shevlin Calls Out Dartmouth Boxers

Hanover, N. H., Dec. 5—Boxing was added to the winter sports under way at Dartmouth when Eddie Shevlin's squad of candidates began organized training.

The Green boxers are entering upon their second season as a recognized intercollegiate sport here, and the Dartmouth athletic council is expected to ratify the most ambitious ring schedule when it meets this weekend.

Eddie Shevlin, who is handling boxing at Dartmouth for the 12th year, does not plan to pick a definite team, but will select his boxers before each match through an elimination tournament. In this way he hopes to keep his whole squad busy throughout the season.

Chessy Antos Out for B. C. Track Team

NOTRE DAME IN PLACE OF NAVY

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Dec. 5—The Army and Navy are not likely to resume football relations and the annual Army-Notre Dame classic is destined to replace it as one of the nation's traditional gridiron battles, Capt. Lawrence "Biff" Jones, retiring Army coach, believes.

Coach Jones, here for the Notre Dame football victory banquet tonight, said the Army-Notre Dame game was amazing in its popularity.

"We could start the Army-Notre Dame game at 10 a. m and fill the Yankee Stadium," he said. "The teams then could retire for lunch, and meet before another capacity crowd at 2 p. m.

Topping that, they could play a night game before 85,000 more spectators, and still 100,000 fans would complain that they were unable to get tickets to any one of the three games."

Coach Jones said he will spend next year at an army commission school as a student and will be back coaching in 1931. He did not say whether he would return to West Point.

HEAVY STAR IN 'PURE' SHOW

The hardest punching heavyweight developed in New York in many years will make his bow in this city in the international amateur boxing tournament to be staged at the Boston Arena, next Monday night between New York, Grand Rapids, Montreal, Toronto and Boston.

Joe Gill, who has piled up a long string of knockout victories and who has received many overtures from professional promoters, will be included among the Gotham boxers to compete here according to word received from New York by Tom Kanaly at the B. A. A.

Other New Yorkers who will compete here include Vincent Valenti in the 118-pound class and Joe Barra in the featherweight class. All three of these boys are considered topnotchers. In addition, a middleweight not named thus far also will participate in the tournament.

Every entry in the tournament with the exception of the High heavyweight representatives have been named. The local committee plans to name their heavyweight hopes today, rounding out a team of 18 Boston boxers, who are expected to score a victory in this tourney.

Plans call for 24 bouts, and as each bout will be between topnotchers in their own districts, it is expected that the tournament will prove one of the most popular of all time. With the Dorchester Post, V. F. W., on hand, and with assurances that the ring will be removed from the Arena it is expected that one of the biggest throngs that ever witnessed an amateur show here, outside of the national championships, will be on hand.

It was learned that many of those out of town boxers will be on hand here Saturday. For this reason, Jim Toland has extended the use of his gymnasium on Friend st. for the use of the boys and no doubt a large crowd will be on hand to get a closeup of them in action.

Champs Train

The champion clubs of the big leagues will train in the same camps, the A's in Fort Myers, Fla., and the Cubs in Catalina Island, off the California coast.

Cougars Play Bruins at Garden Saturday

THE Detroit Cougars, whose 4 to 3 win over the New York Rangers earlier in the week proved that they have finally got started, will play the Bruins at the Garden on Saturday night.

Detroit will come here with a strong team and with many players who are well-known in Boston.

Two of the Cougars are former Bruins. They are Carson Cooper and Jimmie Herbert, who played their first professional hockey as members of the original Bruins back in the winter of 1924.

Detroit and Boston have played some hectic games in the National Hockey League. There was great rivalry between the teams a year ago, culminating in the feuds between Bill Brydge, Reg Noble, Eddie Shore, and other Bruin players, but the teams apparently have buried the hatchet, and fast scoring hockey should be in order in their game here.

The Cougars bring four new players. They are Harvey Rockburn, 170-pound defense man who played amateur hockey with the Gunners of Ottawa and was signed by Detroit a year ago. He started out very well in professional hockey. Another new defense man is James "Rusty" Hughes, 190-pounder, who comes to Detroit from Buffalo. He is a right-hand shot.

Probably the brightest prospect landed by Detroit this year, however, is Ebbie Goodfellow. He is a high-scoring forward, a left-hand shot who played with the Detroit Olympics of the Canadian Professional League a year ago. He was formerly with Montagnards of Ottawa. He weighs 168 pounds is just under six feet, and is 23 years old.

Still another newcomer is Harold Hicks, also a defense player. He is 28 years old, weighs 155 pounds, and he is a product of the Ottawa City League. He played in Saskatchewan in 1922. He was with the Stratford Professionals in 1927 and was signed by Montreal Maroons a year ago, later being sold to the Cougars.

Detroit also has Lawrence Aurie, and Bobbie Connors, who played with them a year ago. Both are young forwards who have a bright future in the game.

The Bruins will be set to play their best hockey against Detroit. They looked better than at any other time this season when they defeated the Canadiens, 3-1, at the Garden Tuesday night.

Particularly encouraging to Manager Dunn has been the way in which Martin Barry, rookie left wing, has progressed, and equally pleasant has been the form shown by Duncan "Mickey" McKay, who never looked better in a Boston uniform than he did against Canadiens.

Capt. Fred Hitchman may be able to play on Saturday night. He had a light work-out at the Garden today. Otherwise the Bruins are in tip-top shape.

Dempsey-Tunney May Meet in Ring

New York, Dec. 5 (AP) Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney may meet without combat in the ring at Madison Square Garden Monday night if the plans of the promoters of the annual Christmas Fund boxing show go through.

Dempsey is sought as referee for the fight card, and an announcement from the New York State Athletic Commission that he has been given permission to serve in that capacity is expected daily.

An invitation has been extended to Tunney to serve as one of the judges for the same program, but he has given no indication whether or not he will accept.

Diehl of Idaho to Play on West Team

Moscow, Ida., Dec. 5 (AP)—Gordon "Spec" Diehl, University of Idaho line captain and tackle, said tonight that he had accepted an invitation to play for the West in the annual East-West football game at San Francisco on Dec. 28.

GREEN TO PICK CAPTAIN TODAY

The juniors on the Dartmouth team are plentiful, and the list includes such players as Andres, Bromberg, Clark, Crehan, Johnson, Nims, Sutton and Wolff.

The choice seems to be between Gay Bromberg and Hal Andres of Newtonville, but Andres seems practically certain to win the election.

Kotsonoras Back in Boston Ring

With his countrymen becoming all steamed up in the struggle, George Kotsonoras, the Greek mat champion, will have an army of admirers at the ringside when he engages John Foddubny, Russian titleholder, in a finish match at the Boston Arena next Wednesday night. It will be the first wrestling show offered by Leslie Showers, the Hub's newest promoter.

Three other good bouts have been arranged to support the main event in these, Jack Taylor, Canadian champion, meets Wladek Zbyszko, ex-heavyweight champion; Tom ... Draak, Netherlands titleholder,

HARD TRACK SEASON FOR MEDFORD

MEDFORD high trackmen start practice next Monday for the indoor season. The Blue and White turns out fine track teams each year. Not many veteran runners are with the team but Coach Pigeon has several good prospects and one or two experienced racers.

Medford faces a hard season on the boards, despite the fact that the Blue and White track team is to compete in only two dual meets. Malden and Newton high schools are the opponents of Medford in these two meets.

The Medford high track teams, in other years, have gone through many dual meets, usually averaging one meet each week during the track season. The high school authorities, however, decided that a meet a week was too stiff a schedule. So this year Medford track men compete in the two dual meets mentioned, and also in several big interscholastic meets, the Northeastern meet, the B. A. A. meet, and the Andover meet being included in the schedule.

Capt. Jim Bowdren is leader of the indoor track team. He is a 600-yard and 1000-yard racer, and probably will run on the relay team. Bowdren may get down to about 2:30 in the 1000 this season, which should be fast enough for a place in any kind of competition.

Dud Miller, King Pushard, Ted Kerr, Perry Jackson and John Roundtree are the other lads who will make a strong bid for a berth on the Medford relay four. Ben De Benedictis, big tackle of the football team, is a fine shotputter, and can earn a flock of points for Medford.

The Boston play teachers met at the Hub school committee building on Wednesday, to discuss plans for the coming hockey season. A schedule was drawn up and the question of selection of referees for the schoolboy games also was brought up.

The Hub sextets play their first games on January 4, at the Boston Arena. All the Boston games are to be played at the Arena, on Saturday mornings, between 8 and 12 o'clock.

Jack Leary, Waltham high coach is recovering rapidly from a cold and sore throat which forced him to stay at home for the past few days. The Watch City mentor should be around again in a few days.

---

Malden high track men start work soon. The Blue and Gold has come along rapidly on the boards during the past five years, and can make any of the school teams go. The schedule for the team for the winter season is not complete as yet.

---

Boys of the Melrose high and other strong hockey schools have had some splendid early season workouts. If the weather stays cold the schoolboy icemen should be in great condition.

TWO TEAMS TIE IN BIKE RACE

New York, Dec. 5 (AP)—Two teams were deadlocked for the lead in the six-day bicycle race at Madison Square Garden today. McNamara-Belloni and Letourner-Brocardo. They had traveled 1317 miles 9 laps at that hour. Three combinations were bunched for second position, a lap to the rear, and two were tied for third place.

Two more teams retired from the grind early this morning. Leroy Garrison collided with Paul Brocardo during one of the jams and hit the iron rail.

He withdrew from the race, his partner, Alphonse Zucchetti, could not find another to pair with in the allotted four hours. Silver and Ritter were so hopelessly outclassed they withdrew, leaving 11 teams left in the race.

Lange Recovering from Gunshot Wounds

Burlingame, Cal., Dec. 5 (AP)—William H. Lange, San Francisco insurance man, better known as "Bill" Lange, famous years ago as a star centerfielder for the Chicago White Sox, was recovering at his home here today from a gunshot wound accidentally inflicted while hunting quail.

More than 100 quail shot entered his body, but a physician said the wounds were not dangerous.

Bouts Last Night

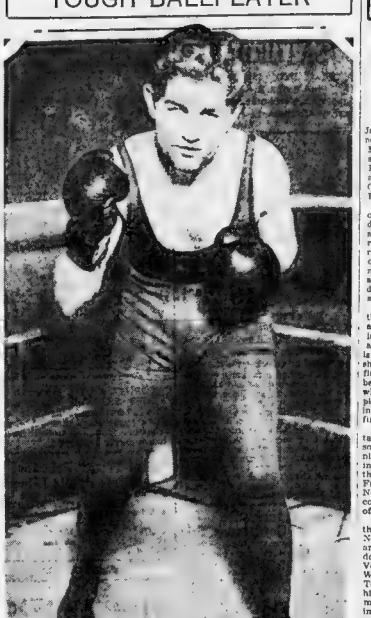
TOUGH BALLPLAYER



Art Shires, above, first baseman of the Chicago White Sox, brought so much of his pugilistic ability after black ening the eyes of "Lena" Blackburne, White Sox manager, that he has become a prize fighter. His first appon ent will be Dan Daly of Cleveland, who says he is a personal friend of Blackburne's. Daly wants to give Shires a receipt for the punches Art let fly at "Lena" last summer. ## GRANDEUR OF WEST GROWS IN WINTER

"Late fall and early winter finds Jack Frost busily altering the aspect of his Rocky and Cascade Mountains," says John H. Kenney, N. E. agent of the Great Northern Railway.

"The mantle of snow which during the long summer days receded until it remained only on the uppermost peaks, again spreads downward," he says.

"Beautiful as these mountains are in summer in winter they are sublime. It is no wonder that the Indians worshiped them, for, under the artistic fingers of Old Man Winter, they become huge cathedrals of virgin white, fronted with bold outcroppings of shale and granite, towering high above a carpet of green fir and spruce trees.

"The grandeur of these mountains is but one of the many reasons why more and more California visitors each year are selecting the Great Northern way to the land of sunshine and flowers. From Chicago to the Pacific Northwest and down the Pacific coast to California it is a route of great scenic attraction.

"Rich in historical romance is this route through America's Northwest. Here courier des bois and black robed priests paddled down unknown streams; here Verendrye searched in vain for the Western ocean; here David Thompson spent the best years of his life charting river courses and mountain ranges; here our own immortals, Lewis and Clark, toiled up the Missouri and across the Rockies to the Columbia and the sea.

"Indian warriors, led by Sitting Bull, Red Cloud and Chief Joseph, made their last stand on these rolling plains. Miners and vigilantes made war against highwaymen and desperado. Here the cumbersome ox cart, the keel boat and the little paddle-wheel steamer led the way for the Iron Horse."

John H. Kenney

France Turns Down Parity With Italy

Paris, Dec. 5—France is unable to accept naval parity with Italy and is unwilling to discuss such parity at the London five-power conference, Foreign Minister Aristide Briand told the Italian ambassador, Count Manzoni.

French observers believed that unless Italy was ready to submerge her parity demand, the Franco-Italian preliminary conversations would likely end without result, leaving the London conference to untangle the problem.

Southern Pacific to Spend $50,000,000 in Expansion

San Francisco, Dec. 5—Revealing a policy of "full steam ahead" and faith in the economic conditions prevailing throughout the nation, Paul Shoup, president of the Southern Pacific, announced that the Pacific lines of his company contemplated new investment expenditures of more than $50,000,000 during the coming year and that the company will immediately place a $5,000,000 order for 120,749 tons of steel rail for 1930 delivery.

Major items listed in the company's improvement program for the coming year reveals that nearly all of the large expenditures will be in its operating equipment and facilities through labor, purchase and construction channels.

HAVANA TOURS ARE SLATED BY CUNARD LINE

With the growing unpopularity of winter, northern style, and the increasing preference for acquiring a tan instead of a cold, hundreds are seeking places in the sun. Of all diversities in this field, Havana is probably the most popular, according to Charles C. Dasey, passenger traffic manager of the Cunard Line.

"She has everything; a perfect climate, romance and atmosphere that rival the most colorful of Europe's ancient towns, and every possible facility for sport and for pleasure," he says, enthusiastically.

Charles C. Dasey

This season, twin transatlantic Cunarders, the Carona and Carmania, will sail between New York and Havana, leaving New York every Wednesday and every Saturday, Dasey announces.

A special event of the winter will be the Mauretania's sailing to Havana on February 12, at the beginning of Havana's Carnival Season, returning to New York on February 15. This popular express liner will make the run between New York and Havana in approximately 48 hours.

In connection with these sailings a number of all-expense tours are available starting at nine days for $193 up to 20 days for $239 up

Publicity Director 25 Years With Road

H. A. Moulton

Howard A. Moulton, special representative of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad and member of the public relations department, today is receiving congratulations from his many friends in rounding out 25 years of service with the carrier.

Moulton took up his duties here in Boston 25 years ago as a publicity man. Through these years he has written miles of stories concerning the New Haven road.

Times have changed considerable since the days of 1904, according to Howard, but with handling his 1001 office details he always finds time to analyze the many problems presented him by newspapermen.

Observation Car for the Wolverine

The Wolverine, one of the most popular of the eight trains running daily to the West by the Boston & Albany Railroad, now has an observation car attached, both eastbound and westbound.

The Wolverine, which has Pullman cars only, leaves Boston daily at 3.15 p. m., and makes the run to Chicago in 24 hours. These two steel observation cars which are to be operated on the Wolverine, both eastbound and westbound, are both up-to-date cars with half the space used for the observation end and the other half of the car will have eight standard sleeping car accommodations. The cars have observation platforms.

TALE OF WINDY CITY TO BE NEXT VENTURE IN FILMS FOR ROLAND WEST

LONG WAIT FOR RIGHT STORY

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 5—Roland West was born with "Alibi" and then he bathed and baited. He has been ill so long that everybody has been reading "memoirs." But Roland West is a rarely intelligent person, he didn't intend to follow a smashing hit like "Alibi" with a no-account picture. He waited and baited his time. And now he thinks he has a great story.

He will film "Love in Chicago" by Charles Wall. I haven't read the book, but from the title and knowing something of the type of story that Mr. West can handle, I should say it would be "Alibi" with Guns."

Chester Morris, who came into the movies and fame with Alibi, will again play the lead with Mr. West, and, of course, for United Artists.

Louella O. Parsons

LUCK is with Merna Kennedy and what luck, when Universal was looking at dozens of tests she was given the leading role in "Broadway," their most pretentious production. And now after Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has tested every actress available, she has been named as the feminine lead in "The Song Writer," Marshall Neilan's first talkie for M. G. M. There is another part almost as prominent, that of a burlesque queen and if Blanche Sweet isn't photographed as young it might have been given to her. She would have been a very "Miss Sweet" make-up picture for her former husband, but Blanche cannot look as old as the role requires—at least that's what I heard on the M. G. M. lot.

"A GREAT actor, my son," who peeved William Collier, Sr., to Mother on the old-fashioned stage at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios.

A swell actor, my old mom, appreciated Collier to be, and the old friend, Lew Fields. The two of 'em, father and son, had just done a part in the Harry Rapp revue Junior introduces Buster Keaton to Collier, Sr., and this act marks the first appearance of the two Colliers together in a movie. "They are both all right," said Lew Fields, who told me he had known Buster since he wore three-cornered pants.

ALMOST a relative of the "Rio Rita" cast is "Dixiana," Bebe Daniels' next picture. John Boles, who emoted so valiantly and sang so delightfully in "Rio Rita," is again playing opposite Miss Daniels in "Dixiana." Then there is Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey. You could bank yourself into insolvency at those two. All I hope is that Bert and Bob aren't in the picture as we've had enough of 'em in "Rio Rita" and "Rio Rita" was swell, proof.

A Blues Shooer

BELLE BAKER

SHE CHASES BLUES away—and we don't mean maybe. Belle opens a personal engagement today at the Metropolitan and is sure to be the highlight of the program.

MME. PERALTA IS COLORFUL AS SUBSTITUTE 'CARMEN'

By MOSES SMITH

THE production of "Carmen" at the Boston Opera House by the Boston Opera Co., encountered a mishap when indisposition prevented the appearance of Sophie Braslau in the title role. It was spectacular that Frances Peralta of the Metropolitan Opera Co., could be hastily engaged and arrived in Boston shortly before going on the stage.

It was even more spectacular that the participation would have gone as well as it did. Leaving out even the question of the real element of natural merit, it was difficult to give a performance of an trick an opera as "Carmen" without a rehearsal with the "stars." And while the star has some ideas of her own as to tempi and interpretation as Mme. Peralta had the job made even more hazardous for all hand. It was the greater tribute to Mme. Peralta, Conductor Giuseppe Bamboschek and the ensemble generally, that what might perhaps have been were turned out.

Mme. Peralta adds the asset was role in good voice, with musical phrasing and with an excellent knowledge of routine. Moreover, not only was her vocal interpretation fresh and unmistakable, as we have suggested, but her acting had many bits of "business" that showed intelligent study of the character. Not always did one agree with these ideas, nor even entirely with Mme. Peralta's conception of Carmen as a creature now skittish, now overly coarse. Yet the characterization was clearly thought out.

Edward Moltore, once seen here with Geraldine Farrar in a version of "Carmen" for the concert stage, made his first appearance with this company, singing the role of Don Jose. His voice and vocal style were suited to the part.

The Opera

Mimi ..... Martha Attwood
Musetta ..... Marie Di Pesa
Rudolph ..... Giovanni Guerrieri
Marcel ..... Joseph Royer
Colline ..... Henri Scott
Schaunard ..... Eugenio Colletti
Benoit } Giuseppe La Puma
Alcindoro }
Conductor, Carlo Peroni

SHE WAS ONCE FIRED FOR SINGING

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

FIRED and hired, just because she can sing! Years ago, Belle Baker was fired out of an East Side sweatshop because she broke forth into song as she plodded away at her "stitch, stitch stitch."

Thus, that same talent of gold that brought about a loss of work when she was a mere slip girl, polished so bright that the aforetime Cinderella of the sweatshop is becoming a mighty wealthy lady in her own right. And she got her riches by dint of her own art upon the stage, and quite recently in the Hollywood studios.

LAST night, Public folks gave Miss Baker a welcome to Boston, on the eve of her daily intervals of entertaining Boston audiences at the Met. She has appeared here in vaudeville, and by a coincidence happens into the Hub just ahead of the premiere showing of her debut motion picture. She has plenty of personality, this "queen of song," and a vocal power that enables her to "emote" wondrously in her singing. Brass gray to gay, and back again, she can travel musically. She is always effective, which accounts for her success before the footlights.

HER life story has in it all the incentive to youth that the once popular Horatio Alger tales had for boys. Out of the depths of real struggle she has risen by sheer personal endeavor, to become a real star of the entertainment world. The daughter of poor Russian immigrants, she had to start working at an early age because her father became ill, she was one of eight children. The pupils had laughed at her at school before she was told the reason was that she had but one dress, "a little polka dot thing," as she tells it. So at once, she is working nine hours a day for $2 a week. "When the truant officer came looking for me at the shop," says Miss Baker, "the other girls led me in a big box of waste, and he couldn't find me. Those girls used to make me sing for them when the boss wasn't around. But one day he came in unexpectedly and fired me on the jo'."

BUT God gave her the gift of song for a purpose. The one or of a music hall, a woman heard her sing and got her a job at $3 a week. Later she received dramatic training under Joseph P. Adler and still later she stepped into vaudeville. She deserves all her fame and fortune, for she is a jolly soul, whole-hearted and capable. She makes 'em laugh and she can make 'em cry. We hope to see her first film "Song of Love," coming to the Keith-Albee, Saturday next, but we know that on stage she's the cat's meow. She's a wow!

Charles King

STAR RETURNS TO HUB STAGE

HUB PIANIST IN LONE RECITAL SATURDAY

Felix Fox

Mr. Fox was born in Breslau, Germany. He spent his boyhood in Boston, returning to Germany where he studied with Carl Reinecke and Jadassohn at the Royal Conservatory of Music, Leipsig. He graduated with highest honors and continued his pianoforte studying in Paris, under Isidor Philipp, celebrated pianist and teacher at the Conservatoire National. Mr. Fox appeared as soloist with the Boston and other symphony orchestras. He was decorated Officer de l'Instruction Publique by the French Government.

Mr. Fox will give a varied program that lists the F Sharp Minor sonata by Schumann, ancient and modern compositions, including one of the pianist's own works, and a group of numbers by American composers, among them Arthur Foote, Marion Bauer, Heinrich Gebhard and Edward Macdowell.

Second Appearance by Compinsky Trio

The Compinsky Trio, which played here last year, made its second appearance at Jordan Hall, last night, before an enthusiastic audience. They played a program of three trios, Brahms' in E flat, Cesar Franck's in F sharp minor, and, for the first time in Boston, Gaspar Cassado's in C.

Show by Herself

CORNELIA OTIS SKINNER

MISS SKINNER will appear this afternoon in the first of three appearances at the Wilbur Theater. The talented actress has a clever repertoire.

"Woof Woof" Principal Utilizes Public Library

WISE CRACKER PICKS HUMOR FROM AIR

HUMOR is a common possession of all nationalities and all sorts and classes of people, according to George Marion Jr., whose job is to create wise cracks at the Paramount studio. Marion's latest work is "Sweetie," a musical romance revue of college life, in which he wrote the story, the dialogue and the lyrics. "Sweetie" is coming to the Scollay Square on Saturday.

"Americans so commonly say that the English have no humor," says Marion, "but this is not so. The English have a different type of humor than the Americans. Where the Englishman achieves wit by understating a situation and so making it ridiculous, the American derives fun from exaggerating a coincident until it assumes laughable proportions.

"For example, if an Englishman barely were to escape drowning, he is worried, not about the mishap, but that he is 'a wee bit wet.' The American, on the other hand, gets his feet wet and describes the occurrence as a near tragedy. Both get laughs.

"Each type of person has his own particular kind of humor. People joke about their surroundings, using phrases that often are not familiar to others, therefore not funny. The society matron may joke about something that is entirely foreign to the chorus girl, and vice versa. Baseball fans, underworld gangsters, policemen, school teachers, college boys and girls, all have their own special humor that is not understandable to outsiders."

THE GIRL WHO IS BEING TALKED ABOUT

But Happier Is She Whom Conventions Protect

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.
An Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

GIRLS of today like to feel they are free—free from old conventions that fettered their grandmothers. Yet the time usually comes to every girl's life when she longs for the protection that convention affords and realizes the practical wisdom of the grandmotherly advice: "It is not enough to be good. You must also seem good if you would be happy. You cannot entirely ignore and defy the opinions of your neighbors if you hope to win favor, respect and success."

Beatrice Fairfax

On my desk this morning are letters from two girls who are obviously fine and self-respecting. Yet happiness and successful romance in both cases is menaced because each girl has chosen to ignore conventional opinion. Is this always worthwhile?

First I shall print the letter of "Jane."

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I am writing to ask you to solve a problem for me which is nearly driving me mad.

"I am a graduate of a nearby college. I am very attractive and a good sport, as the men put it.

"I have been in the habit of meeting college fellows frequently—in fact, I used to go out with a different one every night and it didn't mean a thing. But people were beginning to think something awful about me. Well, it so happens that there was so much talk that I had a reputation—and I was innocent of the whole thing.

"Now I am going with a college fellow who thinks a great deal of me and he has heard stories about me. How can I make him understand that everything is O. K.? If I do marry him I will not be able to live here on account of the talk. And as I said before, I'm innocent.

"What would you advise me to do? Not pay any attention to the talk? It's driving me wild. I thank you and will look for your answer.

Before replying to Jane's letter, let us see what "Little Gypsy" has to say on the same subject:

"DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

"I am keeping company with a fellow I shall refer to him as Jim—and we love each other very dearly. But he is not my main reason for writing you—it is his sister. I have never had the opportunity of meeting her, yet she seems to know me by sight, as she tells Jim.

"I also have a chum who seems to give people the impression she is wild, but she isn't really. Jim's sister thinks my chum is a bad girl and she tells Jim I must be, too, since I go around with her. Now I ask you, isn't that unfair of her seeing that she has never even met me?

"What can I do to make her change her mind about me? It hurts me very much to know that she, my sweetheart's sister, above all things that of me. And I know that soon Jim is going to ask me to choose between him and my chum. What can I do?

"I am sure you have met with other cases similar to mine, and anything you advise me to do will be appreciated.

"LITTLE GYPSY."

Once upon a time some friends of mine, both of whom are much in the public eye, were married to each other. It happened that false reports reflecting on their character and reputation, but expressed so subtly as not to afford grounds for a libel suit, were printed about them.

"This scandal is driving us mad," declared the man and he went to the famous lawyer they consulted. "And the story is absolutely false. What can we do about it?"

"Just one thing," replied the lawyer. "Go down on your knees, and thank God the gossip is untrue and undeserved, then live it down."

That is my advice to you, Jane, and you, Little Gypsy. Deep in your heart, be grateful that unsweeping scandalous reports about you are untrue—and live them down.

Gypsy, you might well make an effort to meet the sister of your beau. Win her over by your kindness and friendly charm. It is far better to have her for a friend than an enemy.

Are you quite sure, Gypsy, that your friend who gives the impression of wildness is really a suitable friend? Are you accurate in your estimate of her? Make sure she is living up to high standards. We are judged—and rightly judged—by our friends.

You will find, Jane and Gypsy, that the very best type of modern girls do not defy public opinion. They value the respect of their neighbors. They are careful to seem as to be good. This is a matter of good sense and wisdom. We are judged—and rightly judged—by our friends.

You will find, Jane and Gypsy, that the very best type of modern girls do not defy public opinion. They value the respect of their neighbors. They are careful to seem as to be good. This is a matter of good sense and wisdom.

THE ASSOCIATION OF Junior Leagues of America is offering a prize for the best design of a corporate seal, due to the fact that the work in use during the early years of the association was inisiald. # METHODS TO KEEP YOUTH FROM CRIME EXPLAINED

Jimmy belonged to the "crooking club" and his gang called him the racketeer" He was only 12

Jimmy was proud of such names He thought himself the great I AM

That was before he got "caught" and taken to the Boston Juvenile Court, and then Jimmy told his story.

In a most unusual experimental record, the Judge Baker Foundation, an institute for the guidance of childhood and youth, presented a film with phonographic records on "Helping Jimmy Make Good" at the luncheon-meeting in the Hotel Brunswick

Three hundred persons attended to hear Judge Frederick P Cabot, president of the foundation and judge of the Boston Juvenile Court tell of remodelling and rehabilitating unfortunate youngsters

"We want to find the true relationship of the boy to himself, his family, his school, his work, his company, his church, his city and his state," Judge Cabot explained. "It doesn't matter whether the boy is feeble-minded normally minded or supernormally minded We must know all the facts if we are to know the problem

And so the film unfolded itself There was Jimmy, a rough and tumble kid who liked to hop freights, hang out with the gang, and do the things the "big guys" did

Jimmy was a leader. He was always at the head, his mother told the authorities. Sure his father wasn't good to him, scolded him when he made noise and sent him out into the streets to play Mother worked six days a week cleaning and scrubbing and father was too sick to hold down a job But mother was sure that Jimmy was a good boy and she wanted the court to think so, too

But when Jimmy was president of the "crooking club"—mother didn't know much about that—his gang pried open a freight car and stole a crate of peaches. And Jimmy was caught.

STUDIED BY EXPERTS

To the Judge Baker Foundation Judge Cabot sent the boy. He was physically examined, mentally tested and psychiatrically investigated

He told his story clearly and without shame. He repeated that he wanted to be like the "big guys" and that he didn't like school.

Why Jimmy?

Well, Jimmy said, you had to know his teacher to know why He didn't like housework, that was a girl's work But he did like being called "racketeer," because it sounded so snappy

After Jimmy was studied mentally, physically and socially the trouble unearthed itself and the family situation was revealed

Mother was ordered to give up her work and stay home, father was ordered to seek hospital treatment enabling him later to work Jimmy was given mechanical training, his proclivities centered around such things. More wholesome recreation in the way of clubs and organized fraternalism was suggested and Jimmy is making good.

Of such work is the foundation composed, Dr. William Healy and Dr. Augusta F. Bronner are the directors; Dr. Bryant E. Moulton, psychiatrist; Miss Edith Stedman, executive secretary; Miss Mildred Dewey, head of social service division, and Mrs' T. Grafton Abbott, publicity secretary.

The film was the gift of Mrs P Bagley Hosts and hostesses at the annual luncheon were Dean Henry Washburn, Christian Herter, Mrs Grafton Abbott, Mrs. Robert F Herrick, Lyneham Crocker, Miss Alice Tapley, Frances Stern, Mrs James Jackson, Mrs James J. THE [illegible] fabric of [illegible] success in a number of [illegible] the [illegible] of [illegible] [illegible] which lame is [illegible] being used [illegible] and now the important [illegible] which lame is [illegible] outstanding favorite

This new vogue for lame is not confined to the evening, mode as formerly, but is found in [illegible] formal expressions of the [illegible] frocks [illegible] [illegible] shown [illegible] [illegible] In the new [illegible] Many [illegible] [illegible] being shown which have [illegible] rather simply [illegible] afternoon gowns to [illegible] wraps and frocks for evening

FOR afternoon functions the lame frock has two outstanding characteristics It is either very formally styled [illegible] sweeping lines or it appears in an almost tailored form with the moderate length skirt. Long sleeves are the fashion for day time, although a few frocks with cape-collar effects and no sleeves are exclusively worn.

Jeweled Clip Fastens Style to the Ensemble

A VERSATILE ornament is this clever small clip pin that will be the seal of fashion on the garment or accessory it is chosen to distinguish. Whether it is placed as a ornament at the V of the neckline, at the wrist, on the hat or the handbag it makes a clever accent for the ensemble

Baguettes in sapphire, ruby or emerald color set in silver are in keeping with the vogue for color in costume jewelry.

TWO afternoon frocks shown here illustrate the types most generally worn by fashionable women. One in lustrous dark colorings and small pattern goes to the full length of afternoon chic, dipping as it does in an uneven hemline just above the ankles. The slim bodice and higher waistline are subtly indicated by the cut of the material.

These frocks, we might add, are most suitable for the informal dinner and theater date

"EXTRAS" ADD TO CHEER IN WALL STREET

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

The flood of extra dividends continues. Late additions to the long list carefully compiled by H. C. Forbes include the following: Maytag, 50 cents extra on common; Reid, Johnson, 25 cents extra on common; Lehigh Valley R. R. $1 extra on common. The Plymouth Private wire advices state American Snuff Co. has declared an extra dividend of 50 cents on common.

Besides these extras note that the National Fireproofing Co declared a dividend of $2 on the common, payable January 6. This marks resumption of dividends, the previous dividend having been paid in 1923. The following were added to the board of directors of Plymouth Cordage Co: Augustus P. Loring, Jr., Francis F. Clark, both of Boston, and Jerome A. Newman of New York.

American Superpower Corp. declared a cash dividend of $1 on the common for 1929. This is the first payment on the present stock, created by a five-for-one split up in June.

In the "old days" New England mill workers were large consumers of snuff. A new generation has come in and snuff-taking has diminished. That it has not died is evidenced by prosperity of snuff companies, as we learn from interesting fact that a free snuff box is maintained for use of the legislators at the national capital. The American Snuff Co has just declared an extra dividend of 50 cents a share on its common stock.

Announcing that the current year is the most prosperous in its history, the board of directors of Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulators Co declared a regular semi-annual dividend of $1.50 a share on the common stock and also an extra dividend of 50 cents a share. Directors of the Motor-Post Terminals Co have declared an extra dividend of 50 cents a share on the common stock. Notices of future action upon dividends are said will be found in our financial news columns today.

"Extras" and dividend resumptions add to such cheer as if felt in Wall and State Streets. They indicate the confidence with which directors face the business future.

Leaders expect the shoe business to prosper. Continued expansion, development and growth of Endicott-Johnson Corp. was forecast by Pres. Johnson in a message to Endicott-Johnson workers following his departure for Seabreeze, Fla., where he will spend the winter.

One big Washington advisory service is arranging a nation-wide poll of business and financial leaders to get their concerted opinion on "the ten best stocks for appreciation in 1930." The results will be interesting, if not convincing. The guess of one man is as apt to be right as the guess of ten thousand.

If all we needed to guide us was public opinion, then a referendum on important problems would bring us speedy solutions.

When we addressed a body of Massachusetts savings bank men some time ago in the Chamber of Commerce building we made careful inquiries which led to our conclusion that, despite wild rumors, stock market speculation was not depleting savings bank accounts in the Bay State, or the rest of New England. Latest figures issued by Bank Commissioner Fred W. Dewey give further support to our view. He finds deposits in Massachusetts savings banks October 31 were $2,033,799,106, against $1,977,006,650 Oct. 31, 1928. The number of depositors on October 31 was 2,946,863, against 2,892,003 on the same date last year. Dividends paid during the year aggregated $76,912,457, against $85,986,185 for 1928.

John J. Raskob declares business is sound at base and by early spring, perhaps March or April, it will again go into high gear after a period of arrested growth due to recent disturbance in stock market. He commends President Hoover's business conferences as "most effective" step and one that is likely to have healthy psychological effect on all lines of industrial and commercial activity.

Price Cutting Does Not Fit Hoover Rules

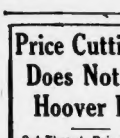
Cut-Throat Price Slashing Would Surely Bring Wage Slashing

By B. C. Forbes

NEW YORK, Dec. 5—If price cutting wars should begin to rage, then promises and pledges to reduce wages would become mere scraps of paper.



B. C. Forbes

President Hoover has enlisted the co-operation of all our main economic groups in attempting the unique experiment of handling a financial panic by entirely new methods. Under the old rules workers were immediately laid off, cut-throat price competition was launched, wages were reduced, strikes were incited, everybody became alarmed and drastically curtailed spending.

Under the rules propounded at Washington, such practices were forsworn.

But if one or more of the most vital of the new rules be broken, it is inevitable that others would go by the board. Thus, if fierce price cutting should set in, prompted solely by the motive of getting business away from rivals, it would be found impossible to maintain high wages. J. P. Morgan & Company, Kuhn, Loeb & Company, Speyer & Company, National City Bank, Chase Bank, Guaranty Trust Company, Dillon, Read & Company, and others sometimes bid for "all or none" of a New York City or other municipal or state bond issue, meaning that if they are not awarded the entire issue, they will not take any of it. The new Hoover rule must, if they are to prove workable, be accepted on an "all or none" basis.

Several letters have come from presidents and other executives of corporations warning against the unleashing of price cutting. One president writes, in part:

"A number of manufacturers and distributors, in their endeavor to keep their plants and warehouses in operation, will doubtless offer goods at prices below the list prices below a fair and reasonable price in order to obtain orders. A condition of this kind causes economic losses to the corporation itself and to the trade and industry.

"The purchasing departments of large corporations would do well to bear this in mind and refuse to place their business at fair and reasonable prices rather than to the company who offers disastrously low prices."

A sales manager sends an elaborate statistical statement to prove the shortsightedness and unsoundness of indiscriminate price cutting "in a blind strife for volume." He adds:

"The strongest force calling for price reduction is the need to keep up volume to absorb the overhead. Plans to reduce expenses, especially the sales effort or broaden the market, are often not made and paid. It is easier to cut the price. Too seldom it is realized that soon the other fellow will be forced to do the same.

"To be sure, there are times when sacrifice of maintain volume is good business. But a decision to sacrifice involves responsibility to forecast results and weigh them against alternate considerations. To illustrate:

|---|---|
| Unit cost | $1.00 |
| Overhead, 50 per cent.. | .50 |
| | $1.50 |

"This shows $1.50 as the 'break even' sales price.

But competition gets keen. A 10 per cent price cut is made. Sales price, now $1.35, leaves only 35 cents for overhead. In order to break even sales would now have to be increased to 2857 units (42 per cent); 35 cents at 2857 units equals $999.95. But a 42 per cent increase is extremely difficult and a 20 per cent increase (2400 units), would be more reasonable. However, this would result in only 35 cents at 2400 units equals $840 or a loss of $160. If the price reduction failed to increase business and only the normal 2000 units were sold the loss would be $500 — 25 cents at 2000 units equals $750.

"If the price was maintained at $1.50 the business to lose 16 per cent sales volume (320 units) at no more loss than $160, and could lose 25 per cent sales volume (500 units) at no more loss than $250.

"The business decides on a 10 per cent price increase to $1.65. Now we have 65 cents for overhead, so we can take a 35 per cent loss in volume (461 units) and still break even; 65 cents at $539 units equals $1000.25."

CURB MARKET IS AGAIN PUT UPWARD

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER.

New York, Dec. 5 (AP)—With operations for the advance again converging upon the electrical power shares, important curb shares were lifted further into new high ground for the recovery today, although progress was still impeded by considerable profit taking on the way up.

American Superpower was once more competing with Electric Bond and Share for leadership in the trading group. Superpower had an extended period of comparative quiescence after formation of the new Morgan-Bonbright holding companies a few months ago, but its recent dividend action and earnings statement showing profit from the sale of securities of approximately $17,000,000 for the eleven months ended November 30 have once more turned the spotlight upon it.

The issue rose some 11 points, bringing it into the neighborhood of 60, compared to its recent low of 15.

Electric Bond and Share, in which Superpower has a substantial interest, was also active and in good demand, getting up around a point from the previous close to 50. American Gas, Northern States Power A and Standard Power and Light, normally wide movers, scored further broad advances Associated Gas A and Middle West Utilities were somewhat hesitant.

Interest in the investment trust group converged upon Shenandoah stimulated renewed buying of the shares.

Blue Ridge and Shenandoah shares, which sold down to about 3 and 7 respectively a few weeks ago, each rose more than 2 points to December 10, while the preferred shares made corresponding gains.

The Interstate Commerce Commission's proposal of an investigation of rail holding companies brought renewed selling in Pennroad, but the issue soon turned about 14, opening with a block of 12,000 shares at that figure.

Oils turned dull, but held fairly steady. Vacuum tumbled 4 points at theopening, then rallied. Sinclair were off with Newmont and Noranda sagging during the morning. Individuals were also active. Crocker Wheeler was in fair demand.

Car & Foundry's Earnings Increase

Consolidated net earnings of American Car & Foundry Co. and subsidiaries for six months ended October 31, 1929, after all charges including Federal taxes, were $2,468,653, equivalent after allowing for regular preferred dividends, to $2.60 a share on 900,000 common shares. This compares with net in the same 1928 period of $1,060,816, or three cents per common share after preferred dividends. Net earnings for the six months ended October 31, 1927, were $2,876,117, or $3.04 a share on the common.

Alcohol Will Hand Out Stock "Melon"

American Commercial Alcohol Corp. declared a 2 per cent stock dividend and 30 cents cash, and dividend of 40 cents on common, both payable January 15 to stock of record December 30. The latter paid a stock dividend of 3 per cent.

It also declared regular $1.75 quarterly dividend on preferred, payable February 1 to stock of record January 19, which is the last dividend payable on the preferred, called for redemption February 1.

THE WORLD OF FINANCE

CARRIER LIENS ARE LEADERS IN BOND MARKET

By JOHN L. COOLEY

New York, Dec. 5—The demand for railroad issues continued in today's market and the movement of floating securities, which has been so pronounced in the last month, showed no signs of abating. Indeed, the volume of October and November issues is a brisk rate.

Several new issues, some of them larger than any of the recent offerings, were announced today.

VOLUME IS SMALLER

Volume ran below the level largely because some of the smaller issues were withdrawn from the market, but offerings of high grade investment securities continued in large quantities.

The readiness of money rates is having favorable effect on the industry. Investment funds from sources, while being drawn from private, industrial purposes, are in high proportion, profit from daily transactions.

New top prices for 1929 were made today in the carrier section, but as has appeared in other divisions. Among the issues touching highs at any time this year were Lehigh Valley First, Erie Refunding 4½s, Lehigh Valley General 4s, New York Central Lines 4½s, Virginian 5s and Lehigh Valley (Pennsylvania) General 4s.

Less close to the peak prices include Baltimore & Ohio Prime, Oregon Washington Railroad & Navigation, Missouri & Manhattan refunding 5s, Rock Island and Arkansas general 4s.

CONVERTIBLES ACTIVE

Chrysler & Northwestern, convertible issues featured the trading material from the standpoint of volume, again displayed activity in connection with public offering in part of that part of the $12,335,000 issue which has not been taken by the stockholders who received subscription rights some time ago. More than half of the allotment was taken by the share owners.

The bonds, recently admitted to trading, fluctuated narrowly, in contrast to the declines of 1 to 5 points appearing in other active convertibles during the earlier part of the session.

A substantial headway by the Bankers' Syndicate of New York received the $24,266,000 City of Detroit rate to 30-year loan in 1954 and 5s. The bid was 100.0199.

The Province of Ontario $30,000,000 21-year issue of noncallable 5s was marketed at 101.

RADCLIFFE GIRL SEEKS PILOT'S LICENSE

By GEORGE HAMBLIN

Coming from behind as the Skyways Inc.'s salesman's race nears the home stretch, Clem McIsaacs is now well in the fore, showing a clean pair of heels to his competitors for the grand prize of a weekend trip to Montreal for the greatest number of sales up to the middle of this month.

Mac, as he is known to all and sundry at the airport, in these days was clocked five students, two for private license courses, two for limited commercial courses and one transport. Two of these will go down to the company's Marston's Mills flying college, and the remaining three will take their instruction at Boston Airport. Among the quintet of students Clem signed is Miss Agnes Wilcox, of Radcliffe College. Miss Wilcox is the first young lady from that seat of learning to take up flying at the local airport.

This fact that Skyways is staging is a contest between all the salesmen, each man having an "airplane" on the map of the country, and for each dollar's worth of insurance sold, he advances one mile on the course from Boston to San Francisco. McIsaacs has completed the leg to the west coast, and is now on his way back.

Hot on his trail, and held up by a three days' illness, is Gladys Ticket seller for Skyways. Tom returned to the airport to find himself in second place, and although he was still somewhat shaky from his touch of grippe, he figuratively rolled up his sleeves and plunged in.

The "Admiral" of the Curtiss-Wright "Navy," "Shorty" Corcoran, has pulled up his anchor and shoved off for the marine station of the company at Rockland, Me., where he will have charge of Bill Winchester's Ireland seaplanes, along with the land ships operated up there.

"Shorty," whose wit and ready smile have made him a more or less famous figure at the airport, climbed into an R-6 Curtiss-Robin, with Gerry Mulligan at the controls, and went barging off to his new station, while a pint with the prospects of fussing around his beloved seaplanes once more.

The biggest regret "Shorty" had as he left was that his "Fish Ball," the faithful rowboat, had not reappeared, after having been stolen some weeks ago. "Shorty" asked us to keep an eye out for "Fish Ball," and we promised we would.

The newest thing in D. H. Moth's, a coupe has been flown down from the factory at Lowell by Al Krapish, chief test pilot for the Moth company. He has brought the ship down so that the local dealers, Skyways, could look the bus over and include it on their sales lists.

The coupe part of the ship is a glass top that fits over the otherwise open cockpits and provides closed airplane comfort to an airplane that is ordinarily of the open type.

After having piled up close to a hundred hours in Fred Thayer's Whirlwind-motored Stearman, Lucien Desjardin came down from Thayer's field at North Grafton with his brother-in-law, Peddle, in the front seat. The purpose of the trip was to see if State Inspector Charles Torpey would check him out for a state commercial license. The usual ritual of air work, and young Lucien was told he was okay. So that makes two of the Desjardin family who are ready and willing to carry people for hire up in the air.

No Bergs or Mushing in Cape Breton, N. S.

Editor Boston American:

In song issue of the 25th inst. I read an article under prominent headlines, "Nova Scotia Beckons to Wee Eskimo," in which Mrs. James W. McFarland tells of the hardships of living in ice-bound Northern Cape Breton.

This article, dealing with references to dog teams, icebergs etc., I wonder if you have any readers in that part of Nova Scotia? If so, I'll warrant that they will amused. Yes, very much amused at Mrs. Young reading of such conditions as Mrs. McFarland claims exist there.

I have travelled all over Nova Scotia, and Cape Breton Island in particular, and at all times of the year, and I have never seen an icebound, and I have never seen icebergs. I have never seen mushing conveyed by dog team (unless perhaps a little boy coming from the pastuffice or local store with his pet dog harnessed to a small sled).

What would the good people of Pleasant Bay say if told that they had never seen an automobile until two years ago. I suppose that Mrs. McFarland wishes to convey the impression that the first glimpse the "native" had of an auto was coincident with her arrival there two years ago. Let me tell young readers that I know of automobiles passing through Chetcamp as early as 1911, and today there are automobiles owned by practically every second family in that section of the Province.

Mrs. McFarland mentions the beautiful Catholic church, which she says "is second only in the 'big church' in Halifax," meaning, I suppose, St. Mary's Cathedral in the capital city. Mrs. McFarland does not know all, as Cape Breton Island is full of large and beautiful churches. What about Inverness, Judique, Iona, Sydney and North Sydney.

Dear Sir: If we are tired of a certain class of American who tell their folks "back home" of the primitive conditions in Cape Breton.

They evidently think that when they classify us along with the mountaineers of Tennessee and with the natives of Greenland that they are getting themselves rated as explorers. United States tourists who have been down this way certainly must smile when they read your article. I wonder if Mrs. McFarland packs along snowshoes and moccasins when she comes this way again, not to mention a fur outfit.

I trust that you will give my letter space, as I feel that we are entitled to an opportunity of contradicting this contribution as Mrs. McFarland. I have been a constant and interested reader of the Boston American for several years past and feel that you would want to do the proper thing. ALEX. D. McLEAN.

Wonders If Curves Indicate Beauty

Editor Boston American:

I'm a dressmaker and would like to get in touch with other dressmakers so that we could talk over fashions and exchange ideas. I would like first of all to see if dressmakers esteem curves the ideal of female beauty, as 30 years ago when the Gibson girl was the rage.

Then why should curves be out of fashion today when they are really beautiful?

Why should the straight figure be so admired?

Among some people to be fat is to be beautiful. Of course, not too fat, but the way that girls are starving themselves today to maintain a straight figure, is sending them to the hospitals.

I would like to get ideas on this and other matters.

CURIOUS.

To Pass Up Young Medical Experts

Editor Boston American:

Can anything be done to bring down the gross pride of these young doctors who pass as experts upon certain complaints?

I believe in experts, but I believe it is better to have the general practitioner named as an expert than these wilty billy young doctors who want to work only 6 hours a day and charge $10 or more a half hour.

Now, this does not apply to all young experts, by any means, but it does fit many of them.

I have had experience, and in the future it is the matured practitioner that has become an expert that will appeal to me.

Scoffs at Advice From Bachelors

Editor Boston American:

Some time ago I attended a meeting where the subject of happy and unhappy marriages was described. What struck me most was that the married people who heard the discussion, did not whimper about marriage. Their silence was very pronounced.

But the bachelors and bachelor maids were constantly airing their opinions about this touchy subject. Nearly all of them were social workers.

Don't you think that marriage should be somewhat a closed subject on the part of those who are unmarried, but when they absorb the time and exhaust the patience in telling their views of married life, is it not time for the married folks to read the riot act to them, to keep them still with their wealth of "advice"

A SUFFERER.

Sees English as Language of World

Editor Boston American:

One is glad to note in daily print, the conclusions of professors of English in our colleges and schools, of knowing that English, in a century, will be the universal language.

Already English is by far the most widely-spoken language on the globe. It is thus in the North American continent, and Australia. It is found in Egypt, even to Cape Town. It is well known in the Far East and India, and will be found growing in importance in South America.

It is the American tongue, more than any one else who are pushing ahead the English language. It is getting into the heart of Americans in it more than ever. American accent of English will be the popular accent throughout the world in a short time.

AUCTION BRIDGE by WILBUR C. WHITEHEAD

ASSIST FOR ORIGINAL TWO NO TRUMP AT CONTRACT

The Auction bidding of this deal proceeds to opening bid of One. Contract the North player is faced with the necessity of deciding upon his proper response to the original two No Trump bid by a partner.

There is a well established convention at Contract as to the requirements for an original two No Trump bid, namely at least 4 Quick Tricks and a hand not stopped, three of which are doubly stopped. Thus, it may be seen that the original two No Trump shows a tremendously powerful hand and that partner should assist if holding anything that even looks like a high card value, should take out if, lacking any high cards, he holds the probability of two long card tricks. The procedure of the North hand in this deal will clarify the question of weak response to original two No Trump bids.

Salient Points of Bidding

Auction: South bids one No Trump and neither opponents nor partner have any sound reason for an overall or take out.

Contract: South bids two No Trumps, originally holding the requirements for such bid as outlined above. West, passing, then considers whether he should take-out with three Diamonds or assist the No Trump. With two Queens, North's preferable procedure is to bid three No Trumps. His partner, having shown double stopper in three suits, must hold a double stopper in either Diamonds or Clubs, or both, and therefore it is safe to conclude that the sum of these suits is practically solid as to tops.

Salient Points of Play

West leads initially his fourth-best Spade, the 5, a fortuitous opening for South as it obviates the necessity for his taking a possibly losing Spade finesse. South wins the first trick with the Queen of Spades and stops to count his hand. He figures his tricks as follows. Two Spades, three of Hearts and five Diamond tricks, or eight in all plus either the King or Club.

Declarer's best procedure therefore is to play his Ace and King of Diamonds at once to find out the actual position of this suit. Both adversaries following to these two leads, South is now assured of his five Diamond tricks, and shifts to Clubs to set up the needed game trick in that suit rather than run down the Diamonds and force discards from his own hand.

Accordingly he leads the King of Clubs, which places West in a most embarrassing position if he should he win this trick, he has no sound lead. West, therefore, allows the King to hold, after which South must now take in his Diamonds as he cannot be sure but what East may hold the Club Ace-Jack over Dummy's Queen.

On the three rounds of diamonds, South and West have two discards to make and South's continuation of play thereafter will depend wholly upon West's discards. He has seven tricks already in and holds the Ace of Hearts and Ace of Spades which must surely make giving him game and the only question is whether or not West, by his discards, will be forced to give up one of two extra tricks when thrown in the lead.

Your Income Tax

There Is Still a Joker in It

(Copyright, 1929)

THE tax cut announced by Secretary Mellon will help the man who earns his income.

Unfortunately, it will not help him ENOUGH.

Earned incomes will still be taxed as much as UNEARNED incomes, and the surtaxes on earned incomes, running as high as 20 per cent, will still be retained.

That is manifestly unfair to wage earners and salaried workers.

A further reduction, bringing the tax on earnings AT LEAST FIFTY PER CENT below that on unearned incomes is essential, and is demanded by all who earn their incomes—by those who, incidentally, will cast most of the votes at the 1930 and 1932 elections.

Congress and the President should remember that.

Brains wear out, depreciate in value like other machinery.

An allowance for depreciation in brain machinery is as necessary as for other kinds. It is more necessary. Brains cannot be replaced by their owners, machinery can.

Why then penalize brains in favor of property?

Echo answers that question, but the Government does not answer it. The Government by its present policy continues to tax ability and thrift and to retard enterprise and achievement, while at the same time it favors capital and the incomes derived from capital.

There is no excuse in logic or justice for that discrimination.

This newspaper suggests that you write to your Senator and Representative in Congress and ask them "how about it?"

You see no good reason why the man who earns a living should carry a heavier tax burden than the man who does not earn a living but has it handed to him on a platter.

There is a joker in that, you observe, and you will want to know why, and what Congress proposes to do about it.

Congress will act rapidly when it finds that the majority of voters are asking those questions.

Exit the Phone Girl

We Shall Miss Her

(Copyright, 1929)

THE robot phone girl is invented. You dial an automatic telephone and a silvery mechanical voice passes the number on to another exchange, here or anywhere, without error.

This is miraculous. Also, in a way, regrettable. For it spells the eventual doom of our most admirable, long suffering and courteous class of public servants.

Like the barber and the mother-in-law, the telephone girl has been the target for countless wisecracks, mostly unjustified. She endures positive and frequent impoliteness without reprisal.

Every week, too, you read of some fire, flood or other harrowing disaster wherein the phone girl sticks to her post, pushes plugs until the danger is over, never even thinks of quitting.

The robot will do that, and do it better. But it won't thrill you. The robot will have only the valor of ignorance—and that, somehow, takes all the bloom off the performance.

Electronic Orbits

By ARCHIBALD HENDERSON

NIELS BOHR, the Danish physicist, has accustomed us to the idea that an atom is a rough analogy, in miniature, of our solar system.

As we go up the scale of the elements, we find the free electrons revolving about the atomic nucleus in many orbits of different sizes, shapes and positions.

As it happens, there is never room for more than one electron in the same orbit, it is almost as if the electron swelled in such a way as to occupy the whole of its orbit, leaving no room in it for another electron.

This properly reminds us of a familiar saying, which likewise is a foundational principle of science: two different pieces of matter cannot occupy the same space at the same time.

"The Universe Around Us," says that electrons in their orbits are like man on a ladder: just as no two men can stand on the same rung of the ladder, so no two electrons can ever follow one another round the same orbit.

Take Neon, for example, with ten electrons. It is in its formal state of lowest energy when its ten electrons each occupy one of the ten orbits whose energy is lowest (Fig. 3).

For heavy atoms, the distribution of the free electrons is far more complicated than in the case of the neon atom with its simple electronic satellite.

In the heavier atoms, the orbit of certain free electrons is found to be not a Kepler ellipse, but a curve consisting of a series of ellipticisms.

Each of the large number of electrons present acts upon the others; and when a comet" electron dives into the inner structure of the atom, it moves rapidly around the nucleus, towards which it approaches even closer than some of the innermost groups of electrons.

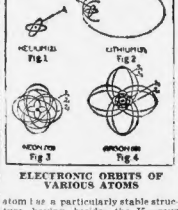
Begin with the Hydrogen atom. The single electron goes around the little circular orbit, one three hundred millionth of an inch in diameter, about seven thousand million times in a millionth of a second.



ELECTRONIC ORBITS OF VARIOUS ATOMS

In the Helium atom, each of the two electrons revolves in a small circular orbit of diameter half that of the orbit in the Hydrogen atom, the planes of these orbits being inclined at an angle to each other (Fig 1). This is known as the K group, which persists in all atomic nuclei of higher changes than the Helium nucleus.

In the Lithium atom, there is captured a third electron, which moves in an orbit of oblong loop (Fig. 2. Note the recurrence of the K group).

Passing over the next intervening elements, let us now consider Neon, the next inert gas. The Neon atom has a particularly stable structure, having, besides the K group four electrons in one type of orbit and four electrons in another type of orbit (Fig. 3). This new group of eight electrons, known as the L group, recurs in all atoms of higher atomic number than Neon.

PASSING over Sodium, Magnesium, Aluminum, Silicon, Phosphorus, Sulphur, and Chlorine, let us consider Argon (atomic number 18). This has a quite symmetrical architecture. In addition to the K and L groups, already observed in Neon, it has eight new orbits (Fig. 4.).

The atom, when the electrons are occupying the orbits of lowest energy, is as near a true perpetual motion machine as Nature has to offer. The electrons continue to move in their orbits without any of the energy of their motion being dissipated. This property is responsible for keeping the universe in being.

"Give the Girl a Hand"

By Nelson Harding

The Market Drop is sheer and steep,
But ledges on the rocky wall
Have fortunately intervened
To check the unexpected fall.

The wise investor, reaching down
With strength and coolness at command,
Becomes a timely rescuer
In offering a helping hand. —N. H.

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

These diplomatic hieroglyphics are merely the usual dibdabs and jiggers that any man would make when listening to a psychologist or any other unwelcome visitor.

One of Mr. Hoover's favorite designs is a cobweb. Here is the way the experts analyze it.

The cobweb—its round markings, ornamented with triangles, indicates a mechanical turn of mind, a mind which would conceive bridges or turbines. The top part of the cobweb shows that he would rather be remembered in history than patted on the back now. He is ruthless in forging ahead with his plans.

---

It either indicates that, or possibly that Mr. Hoover aspires to be an army carpenter.

---

The telephone booths are stenciled profusely with the same kind of erratic penmanship that New Yorkers execute while telephoning or otherwise mentally deranged.

---

Another of President Hoover's dabs in elementary psychology is the comet, which is diagnosed:

---

The Comet—the round sweeps of the comet, which terminate in triangular marks, indicate that this man is a good starter, but often leaves things for some one else to finish.

---

As a matter of referendum and recall, the President is hoping that his visitor gets smacked on the nose by a comet.

---

The tablecloths of the Astor hotel are famous for their lightly engraved pencillings of famous financiers. The usual design is the dollar mark with its business end slanting toward the party of the first part. Once in a while, you see the stains of soup or pie. It's an old Spanish custard.

---

While dining with the late Dion O'Bannion in Chicago we noticed him scribbling some abstract psychology on his napkin. We glanced over his shoulder to criticise his technique. Mr. O'Bannion's art consisted of a lily with its petals skimbo. We strolled out leisurely and came back the next day for our hat and overcoat.

---

H. G. Wells Writes on

"The Science of Life"

In Collaboration With

Prof. Julian Huxley and Geo. P. Wells

THIS is the blind spot; at this point there are no sense-cells at all, so no appreciation of the image is possible. Under the normal conditions the blind spot of one eye is covered by a sensitive part of the other, so its existence is not suspected.

H. G. Wells

The characteristic thing about the eye is the precision of the spatial information that it can obtain. By means of its nose a mouse can tell that there is a cat about somewhere; by means of its ears, it can hear him moving and locate him roughly; but, by means of its eye, it can get precise information of the enemy's whereabouts—and that, after all, is the most important thing to know.

SENSATIONS OF POSITION AND MOVEMENT.

We have already remarked that the muscles, tendons and joints are provided with minute sense organs of elementary structure, sensitive to such stimuli as the tension in a muscle or the degree to which the two faces of a joint slide over each other. By means of these organs our impressions of the relative positions or our parts are derived.

If, for example, we close our eyes and allow some other person to move one of our arms into a new position we have no difficulty in feeling what position the arm has been put into. Such sensations are due to these simple organs in the muscles and joints.

The central nervous system is continually receiving impulses from these organs, and such impulses play a very important part in controlling movements.

Obviously, if the central government wants to put the right hand into any particular position the muscles that must be called into action depend on the position that the movement starts from.

During complex acts, such as walking, impulses are constantly streaming in from the joints and muscles, informing the central government what stage in the walking process has been reached so that it may know what to do next. This point may not seem very evident to the reader, but it is amply proved by the symptoms of diseases, such as locomotor ataxia, in which the sensory nerves of the legs are put out of action, while the motor nerves are unimpaired. There is no loss of power in the muscles, but there is a surprising loss of control. Even in the early stages the patient has to look at his legs while he is walking to get some idea of what to do next; usually he exaggerates his movements, raising the feet too high at each step and putting them to the ground with a stamp.

In the later stages, walking becomes quite impossible; when an attempt is made the legs are thrown about in all sorts of directions without any effective result.

Thus, in spite of well-nourished muscles and intact motor nerves, the patient's legs are paralyzed as far as any useful activity is concerned.

In addition to these important sense-organs there is yet another group, a group of very elaborate and specialized sense-organs, situated in the head, from which we get impressions of the position and movements of the body as a whole.

The labyrinth of the inner ear, as we have seen, is a hollow bag of complicated architecture, embedded in bone. Moreover, only a part of it is concerned with the perception of sounds. On its left is the spirally coiled cochlea, where sound vibrations are converted into touch-stimuli; in the middle there is a bag, the vestibule, and on the right lie the structures with which we must now concern ourselves.

It will be seen that there are three arching tubes, the semicircular canals, each leading out of the vestibule, sweeping round in a regular half-circle, and opening again into the vestibule. It is important to observe that these three canals lie in three planes at right angles to each other. The posterior canal lies in the plane of the page, while the other two stand out perpendicularly from it; at the same time the planes of the posterior and lateral canals are perpendicular to each other.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

THERE is a brighter side to all things, and the silver lining to the recent Wall Street cloudburst is the sweet thought that, NOW, we can stop struggling to "keep up with the Jones'!" Oh, joy!

It is quite the smart thing to be "broke," and you can wear gasoline gloves and moth-eaten furs and still leave the impression that you "got millions in the market."

Most of us will be terribly busy for the next few years, struggling to bring our running expenses down to a WALK. And those who still have plenty of money will be either ashamed to admit it or too delicate to display it in the presence of those who have lost theirs.

Even the solvents will talk "frugality," and be afraid to be seen dashing around in new imported cars and ermine evening coats, for fear that all their bankrupt friends will try to borrow money from them.

It's no disgrace to be poor when you're poor en masse. And the whole country will probably go "Greenwich Village," where it's the fashion to be penniless and you brag about how cheaply you can eat and how little you can live on.

To be as dowdy as an English duchess will be positively swank, and darned stockings will be a mark of social distinction. All the Scotch jokes will come TRUE.

The only danger is that there will now be as many "ex-millionaires" as there once were Kentucky colonels and Russian archdukes running loose around the country.

Everybody who once had a couple of shares of Blue-Sky Preferred worth two dollars at par will now think of himself bitterly as "a Big ex-Wall Street Plunger."

Speaking seriously, it's going to be a mighty healthy thing for this Land of the Free Spender to stop worshipping the Golden Calf and go back to honest WORK.

Lots of tired men and women will be glad to stop hitting the high spots and give up the painful struggle to keep up with the Jones's; to get out of their evening clothes, stay away from parties and read some of the unopened books in their own libraries—to stop showing off and begin really LIVING again!

To some, this may seem like only a silver-PLATED lining—but it may turn out to be platinum set with diamonds for lots of husbands who have been yearning to spend a few quiet evenings at home—and for lots of wives who have been wishing their husbands would STAY at home. No money—no whoopee!

The Arab's Memory

It Is Long, Cherishing Vengeance

(Copyright, 1929)

THE BRITISH, for the time being, have established peace in Jerusalem. Here and there a killing, but no wholesale massacre.

Arabs have been sentenced to various penalties for taking part in the killing of Jews, some sentenced to death.

The Arabs bitterly resent findings of the British court. They hate and detest, with a detestation that will last for centuries, the Balfour Declaration, a pledge of the British Government, by which Jews all over the world are guaranteed the right to re-establish a national center in Jerusalem.

---

This is the Bedouin Bazaar, or Shice Market, on the day of the boycott. Ordinarily crowded with Arabs, the place, as you see, was deserted during the boycott.

A DESERTED ARAB BAZAAR IN JERUSALEM.

Arabs are vengeful, have long memories.

The firmness of the British Government and the wisdom of those who manage Jewish colonization in Palestine will, it is hoped, overcome even the long Arab memory and hate.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Dec. 5—Many printed rumors that Brione, the little Italian isle in the Adriatic, whither the Gene Tunneys fled from publicity, is booming, are not exaggerated. Gluttons for a vaudeville circuit. At times he is seen in mid-town on his way to the Lambs. His step is springy, his shoulders squared and he seems perennially poised as though waiting for the familiar gong.

They were discussing the newest of comedians, the hollow-eyed Charles Butterworth, and his success this season. "But," observed a critic, "he cannot sing or dance. He can only make people laugh."

In the New York telephone directory there is listed: Charles Smith, Schools. Mr. Smith is president of the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism, and is quite proud of his job.

---

A unique trick is being employed by bootleggers who live a la custom. They learn what rival lanes the hijackers and wait for a day or two after an order is placed. Then they phone excitedly, saying it is the new bootlegger and a discovery has been made the delivered goods are bad. It not only results in a severe fright, but in the hurried destruction of the liquor.

---

Twenty new bird stores have opened in six months. The demand for canaries, love birds and cockatoos in rent house patios and gardens is responsible.

---

Still the most finished worrier I know weighs 214 pounds. On the other hand, starting at scratch, I'll worry almost any one for a quarter a side and I'm certainly no Big Bill Edwards. So there you, as the saying goes, are!
